LOVE AT A LICK

I met her in her peplum With a stunning parapluie, I felt that I was done for-She had come it over me; She had come it with her top-knot, All on a lofty rise, And her little dinner plate chapeau Down slanting o'er her eyes.

She didn't look like anything Man ever loved before, For-you bet-that such a pattern Never came to light of yore. Such a funny style of head dress, Like a plate for making pies, Just resting on a fireplug, And down slanting o'er the eyes.

Its oh ! her robe de promenade, Its oh ! her bully glance ; And oh ! that howling style of dress, Tout a la mode de France. I'm ecrease and busted,

And dreadful are my sighs

O'er that fire-plug and dinner-plate, Just sliding o'er her eyes.

The man who is without an idea, gener ally has the greatest idea of himself.

Those who always love, have not the leisure to complain and be unhappy.

"Oh, what a soft seat !" as the hat said when placed on a dandy's head.

Politeness, like running water smooths the most rugged stones.

What do we always drop, yet never stoop to pick it up? A hint.

We should do everything to let good people have their will.
