A TOWER OF SKULLS. -Lamertine in his "Pilgrimage to the Holy Land," writes as follows:--"When I was about a league from Nisa, the last Turkish village, almost on the frontier of Servia, I saw a large tower rising up in the midst of the plain, as white as Parian marble. I sat down under the shade of the tower to enjoy a few moment's repose. No sooner was I seated than raising my eyes to the monument, I discovered that the walls which I supposed to be built of marble, or of regular rows of white stone, were composed of regular rows of human skulls. Bleached by rain and sun, and cemented by a little sand and lime, formed entirely the triumphal arch which now sheltered me from the rays of the burning sun; there might be from fifteen to twenty thousand. In some places, portions of hair were still hanging, and waved like lichen or moss, with every breath of wind. The mountain breeze was then blowing fresh, penetrating the innumerable cavilties of the skull, and sounded like a mournful and plaintive sigh. These were skulls of fifteen thousand Servians who had been put to death by the Pacha, in the late insurrection in Servia. However, Servia, is now children the value of independence, by showing them the price at which their forefathers purchased it.

A young lady from the Seminary at have some more cabbage, replied : "By no in proportion. Now is the time to buy. Country produce of every kind, at the highest astronomical satiety admonishes means.
