SENATOR MORTON'S SPEECH.—We, to-day, publish Senator Morton's great speech on reconstruction, to the exclusion of our usual variety of reading matter. The speech is one of unusual interest, in that it defines clearly the powers of Congress in reference to the question of reconstruction. We hope our readers will give this important document a careful perusal.

On the last day of January all the gutters were frozen over in New Orleans, and there was some skating on shallow ponds. The Picayune says that for the first time in years people found solid ice in their pitchers in the morning.

In some parts of Alabama snow fell during the last week of January to the depth of six inches, an occurrence so rare that some of the oldest inhabitants have found it remarkable.

The Fort Smith Herald says that Arkansas is situated in the midst of one of the richest and most extensive coal fields in the country, requiring only labor and capital, and not very much of either to make it pay.

The power of Junex is strengthened in Mexico, and it would not be surprising to see him lift to his own head the crown which rolled from the corpse of the murdered Maximilian.
