MIDWINTER.
The frost-work shines about the pines,
The merry bells are chiming, The happy ways of happy days I cannot turn to rhyming Who leaves life's care and labor's wear, And acts a merry part,
May find midwinter in the air, Midsummer in the heart.
Yet while Springs flush and Summers blush,
And Autumns color deeper, While Winters pale still some must yield Their treasures to the reaper.
Midwinter's bells ring out like knells Upon their startled hearing; How vainly swells the song that tells Their loss of joys endearing!
God pity those borne down by woes Who set life's saddest part—Who find midwinter in the air, Midwinter in the heart.

My First Drunk on Lager Beer.
There were four of us in one room—Dukes, Brutus, Lance and myself, and I can safely say that four jollier cusses never occupied a fourth-story front in a fashionable boarding house, and eat hash together three times every day.
We were independent, all of us, and didn't care a three-cent stamp for any other in the house.
We paid for the hash weekly; we never asked to be trusted.
We all washed in a cracked wash bowl, and brushed our hair before the same mirror (size 6 by 14,) and hung up our clothing in the same wardrobe, and obtained light from a very smoky lamp.
Ah, that lamp! how often I have had to strike a match to see if it was burning!
One evening we all felt badly. We felt as if we would like to go home and see our mothers, for we had just eaten supper, and had hash, of course.
We were all standing by the door, meditating what we should do. Each was smoking a pipe, and viewing numerous specimens of female beauty as they flitted past us.
"Suppose we take a beer," said Dukes, throwing away his cigar.
We had no objections, so we stepped into a saloon kept by a Dutchman with a very large stomach, and each of us took a beer.
Then Brutus insisted that we should take a beer with him, and we did so.
Lance then gave us to understand that he should not go back on him; so we took a beer with Lance.
It was my turn next, and we had another beer.
By this time I began to feel like a stuffed rock fish, and had to unbutton the top button of my pants.
Lager beer had begun to taste like dish-water and quinine mixed together, and I was confident I could write German in blank verse—(very blank indeed.)
With our next drink we ordered a thing called pretzel, which looks like a snake twisted up with the cramp coil. I now lie as if my head was on the wrong end of me, and I concluded to go home; so I started.
We all got safely up in our fourth-story front, but I don't know whether I carried somebody up or somebody carried me up; anyhow, we all got up and the wash basin was wanted immediately.
"Lance," said I, "don't you know (hic) that lager beer won't intoxicate?"
"Darned (hic) lie!" replied the festive cuss who has his head on Brutus' stovepipe hat, thinking it was the wash-basin.
"Snooks," said Brutus, who had his head under the bed and his feet on the wash-stand — "Snooks, let's (hic) take a beer, or any other man (hic, hic). Four beers, old chap."
"Black Crooks for four!" yelled Dukes;
"fill 'em all up again!"
"Gentlemen," said Lance, "such conduct as these are (hic) a disgrace to the establishment! Gentlemen, (hic) I implore you not to forget that we'll have hash for breakfast!"
"Set 'em up again," said Brutus, who now had his head over Lance's hat and appeared to be groaning and reaching over it.
I wasn't in the humor for talking at that time, for everything in the room was dancing a hornpipe.
The beds were promenading with each other, the wash-stand was balancing to the smoky lamp, and the water-pitcher was dancing with the looking glass; while Brutus' trunk was kicking up the dickens with mine, and Dukes' was running Lance's trunk a race all around the room.
I at last went to sleep, and dreamed I was a high pressure boiler in a Delaware river tug boat, and thought they were getting up steam on me. The safety valve was tied down, and the engineer was drunk on lager beer. Now the steam was up to 200 pounds, and, Jerusalem, jingo! I exploded with an awful crash, which woke me up, and I found lager beer running out of my mouth in a stream as thick as my arm, and it tasted ten times more bitter than when it went down.
 When morning came I found Brutus on his bed, with his head in a hat box, and his feet on a pillow.
 Lance had his feet in Dukes' coat pockets, and Dukes had his feet on a bed and his head on a trunk; while I found myself laying crossways on a bed; with nothing on but my boots and a paper collar.
 I had an awful headache, and Lance poured cold water on the back of my head to cure it; but it was no use, I had the headache for three weeks.
 I was drunk all day and all night; I believe I was worse the second night than I was when I drank the beer. I've had to get my hats a size larger ever since, and whenever I hear anybody speak of lager beer I experience a nauseous sensation underneath the lower button of my vest.
 Brutus and Dukes have not got sober yet.
 Lance has sworn off. So have I, but I ain't going to take the pledge until I have recovered from my first drunk on lager beer.

A Slight Mistake.

They have some affecting weddings out in the flat country, beyond the trees.
In the semi-rural district of Winona, lives, among several other people, a good jolly fellow of the name of the peace. One fair day, after the tea by twelve dispensary had been swept, there was a step heard on the stair, and a very vigorous rap at the door.
"Come in," said the justice.
A handsome, black-eyed, Spanish looking woman entered. It was a clear case of a senorita, of the New Mexican brand. She had on a short woolen dress, woaden soled shoes; spotted red cheeks, black hair, and eyes that snapped like the lock of a shot gun. In a Spanish accent, and in the worst possible English, she said:
"You make justica aquita? You the law man?"
"Yes, madam; be seated."
"Want paper; want paper to take the man."
Just then a stout French half-breed entered the room. He was unable to speak a dozen words, and he looked either scared or bashful. The justice saw at once that there was a marriage to come off, and turning to the woman said:
"Want paper to take this man?"
"Yes; want paper; me teach him." (Nice woman, thought the justice.)
"All right," as he turned to the man and said, "you know this woman, can take her?"
The man shook his head and uttered unintelligible words.
"Ah, I see; can't talk English; well never mind."
He ran into the street, invited a few friends up stairs, and then said to the woman:
"You want to take him?"
"Yes, me pay."
"All right."
Then turning to the man, who stood trembling:
"You take this woman for better or for worse, and promise to keep her?"
"Umph!" an several nods of the head.
"Then in the name of the law, and by virtue of the authority in me vested, I pronounce you man and wife." And he stepped forward, before the woman could say a word, and kissed her red lips.
Slap! came her hand in his face, and she clutched his hair. The new husband jumped to take the woman away, and to protect her, as the man supposed, when in self-defense the justice gave him a rap on the nose.
The woman pitched into the new husband, who in turn pitched into her, and for about five minutes there was a general bashing.
At last the parties were separated, when the man and woman took another turn at each other, the blood and hair flying in every direction. Down came the stove, over went the table, clatter went the chairs, and into the street like mad went the justice, with the bosom of his shirt looking like a warranty deed covered with red seals!
A crowd rushed up stairs and found the man and woman lying on the floor, the woman on top, and pommeling the newly made husband with a will.
The newly married couple were separated, when through the aid of the two interpreters it was discovered that the parties, occupying adjoining shanties in the lower part of the town, had got into a dispute over some stove-pipe that was claimed by both, and from words they had come to blows.
Each party had hastened to the justice for a warrant for the other, with the result as stated above.
The last news from there was that the parties had gone in search of another justice to unmarry them.

STAMPING A DEED.—Blinker, a farmer of means who does not take the paper, nor reads the laws, but who thinks his wisdom boundless, sold a pasture for three hundred dollars. The purchaser, having counted out the money looked at the deed and said—"Mr. Blinker, you must put a fifty cent stamp on the deed to make it lawful."
"What! stamp a deed? It's all folly; there's no such law," said Blinker, on his dignity.
His friend explained, but failed to make Blinker see it, and was obliged to say—"Well, if you do not stamp the deed, I shall not pay you the money."
"If you are so darned particular," said Blinker, "I suppose I can stamp it fifty cents' worth, but I hate to spoil the squire's writing."
"The deed was handed him; he off with his coat, stepped back into the room, laid the deed on the floor, and commenced stamping it with his foot. The purchaser, the squire and witness, turned all colors, and finally laughed hysterically. Catching his breath he said—
"What are you doing Blinker—are you crazy?"
"Doing? Why I am stamping this darned deed fifty cents' worth, and I calculate 'twill take me five hours, reckoning time at ten cents an hour."

California is rapidly coming to the front as the wheat-growing State of the Union.
Her wheat crop for 1867 footed up to over twenty million bushels, and as it realized fully $2 50 in gold per bushel, it follows that she is to-day $50,000,000 better off for it.
Add to that the value of 4,000,000 gallons of wine and brandy, and an almost incalculable fruit crop, and you have some idea of the money realized by the farmers of California last year. It is estimated that this year 1-000,000 acres will be planted in wheat alone.
Give the average of thirty bushels per acre —the estimate is a low one for California—and we shall have 3,000,000 bushels of wheat. This places California in the front rank of wheat producing States. Her corn crop is of small account, and the barley and oat crops will, perhaps, be less than in 1867, but the aggregate will be enormous and must materially affect the grain market.

HARD TO PLEASE.

Pitts is a fast man, a sharp man, a business man, and when Pitts goes into a store to trade he always gets the lowest cash price, and he says—"Well I'll look about, and if I don't find anything that suits me better I'll call and take this."
Pitts, like all fast men, is partial to women, and young ones in particular. Now, quite lately, Pitts said to himself—"I am getting rather long in years, and guess I'll get married."
His business qualities wouldn't let him wait, so off he travels, and calling up a lady friend, opened conversation by remarking that he would like to know what she thought about his getting married.
"Oh, Mr. Pitts, that is an affair in which I am not so greatly interested, and I prefer to leave it with yourself."
"But," said Pitts, "you are interested; and, my dear girl, will you marry me?"
The young lady blushed very red, hesitated, and finally, as Pitts was very well to do in the world, and morally, financially and politically of good standing in society, she accepted him; whereupon the matter-of-fact Pitts responded—"Well, well, I'll look about, and if I don't find anybody that suits me better than you, I'll come back."

HAD THE SYMPTOMS, BUT NOT THE DIS-EASE.—The Janetville Gazette tells the following good one of Lute Taylor, of the Prescott Journal. Last winter Lute was traveling in the stage with a party of gentlemen, among whom was a noted Democratic politician from Minnesota, now a candidate for a State office. The day was intensely cold and the company were obliged to stop occasionally to warm up. Halting at a little inn by the roadside, the Democrat invited Lute to take a drink of whisky, to which he readily assented and as Lute was both thirsty and old he turned out a pretty stiff "horn." swallowed it instantly and prepared at once to thaw out. Lute's free and easy style suited the Democrat to a dot, and after freely tubbing himself, he walked up to Lute and said: "I'll bet any man ten dollars that you are a good Democrat." As Lute is an awful radical this touched his pride and he replied in his usual stammering style: "I advise you not to bet more money than you wish to lose. I acknowledge I have had all the symptoms, but not the disease."

On dry ice, rubber over shoes are a pretty certain safeguard against a tumble. But when the ice is wet, the rubber sole is less reliable than the sole of leather. Yet a person's footing may be assured on ice, dry or wet, by a coarse carpet sole. It is not necessary that this should extend the whole length of the shoe or boot, or that it should be a permanent attachment. It may consist of a strip of coarse tu x two inches wide passed around the foot just beyond the in-sole. To prevent its slipping off in walking, it may be attached to the ankle in various ways, too simple to need to be described.
The idea of this anti-slipper was suggested by seeing the conduct of the oceanists who infect Niagara Falls, and act as guides to visitors. These greedy gentry, by wearing carpet slippers, are enabled to run and walk up and down steep and slippery rocks without accident or danger.

A lawyer once came into court drunk, when the Judge said to him: "Sir, I am sorry to see you in a situation, which is a disgrace to yourself and family, the court and profession to which you belong." This reproach elicited the following colloquy:
"Did your honor speak to me?" "I did sir; I said sir, that in my opinion you disgrace yourself and family, the court and profession by your course of conduct." "May it please your honor, I have been an attorney in law in this court for the last fifty years; and, permit me to say, your honor, that this is the first correct opinion I ever knew you to give."

A Gentleman was chiding his son for staying out late at nights—or rather early of next morning—and said: "Why when I was of your age my father would not allow me to go out of the house after dark!"
"Then you had a duce of a father—your dad!" sneered the young prodigal. Whereupon the father very rashly vociferated: "I had a confounded right better'n than you had your young rascal!"

A wide-awake Minister, who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he had fairly commenced, suddenly stopped and exclaimed: "Brethren, this isn't giving a man half a chance. Wait till I get a long piece and then I ain't worth listening to, go to sleep; but don't begin to snore before I get commenced; give a man a chance!"

An Irishman having challenged a gentleman to fight a duel, who somehow "forgot" to attend the appointment, met accidentally that same day the offending party, and thus addressed him: "Well, sir, I met you this morning, but you did not come; however, I am determined to meet you to-morrow morning, whether you come or not!"

An old lady combated the idea of the moon being inhabited, by remarking with emphasis that the idea was incredible; "for," said she, "what becomes of the people in the new moon when there is nothing left of it but a little streak?"

NUISANCES.—Cross-eyed spinsters, mischief making women, grumbling old bachelors, dilapidated sidewalks, squalling children, frowsy wives, dirty postal currency, and a subscriber who does not pay for his paper.
A man lately inquired for letters at a country post office, and upon being told that there was none, he asked if there was not another post office in the place.
How sweet to recline in the lapse of ages says about eighteen.

ELLIS IRWIN,
THOMAS L. BAILEY,
LEWIS I. IRWIN,
Goshen tp., Dec. 8, 1865.

The undersigned, having taken charge of the above named Hotel, generally known as "The Lanich House," situated at the corner of Market and Second Streets, Clearfield, Pa. desires to inform the public that he is now prepared to accommodate those who may favor him with a call.
The house has been re-fitted and re-furnished, and hence he flatters himself that he will be able to entertain customers in a satisfactory manner.
A liberal share of patronage is solicited.

NEW ARRANGEMENT.

The subscribers have entered into co-partnership, and are trading under the name of Irwin, Bailey & Co. in lumber and merchandise, at the old stand of Ellis Irwin & Son, at the mouth of Lick Run. They will inform their friends, and the world in general, that they are prepared to furnish to order all kinds of sawed or hewn lumber, and solicit bills, for other home or eastern markets.
They would also announce that they have just opened

A NEW STOCK

of well selected goods, suitable to the season, consisting of every variety usually kept in country stores. Their purchases have been made since the late decline in prices, which enable them to sell at such rates as will astonish their customers.
One of their partners, Thomas L. Bailey, resides near Philadelphia, whose business it will be to watch the markets and make purchases on the most favorable terms. Call and see us.

CLEARFIELD MARBLE WORKS.

ITALIAN AND VERMONT MARBLE FINISHED IN THE HIGHEST STYLE OF THE ART.

The subscribers beg leave to announce to the citizens of Clearfield county, that they have opened an extensive Marble Yard, on the Southwest corner of Market and Fourth streets, Clearfield, Pa., where they are prepared to make

Tomb Stones, Monuments, Tombs, Box and Side Tombs, Cradle Tombs, Cemetery Posts, Mantles, Shelves, Brackets, etc., etc., on very short notice.

They always keep on hand a large quantity of work, finished except the lettering, so that persons can call and select for themselves the style desired.
They will also make to order any other style of work that may be desired; and they flatter themselves that they can compete with the manufacturers outside of the county, either in workmanship or price as they only employ the best of workmen. All inquiries by letter promptly answered.
