APRIL.

I hear through all the solemn pines The south wind's pleasant flow, And see the clouds, like happy things, O'er fields of azure go, While all the sorrow from the earth seems melting with the snow.

The robin and the bird sing O'er meadows brown and bare; Is softly budding there; But all the joy their hearts outpour Seems pulsing in the air.

And we will sing, though all our days Seem dark with pain and loss; We know that Sorrow's furnace heat Consumes alone our dross; We know that one dear Father's love Gives both her crown and cross.

Oh, while benath the snow-drift, buds The flower we love the best, And on the wind-toss'd bough the bird Still builds its happy nest, Praise God for all the good we know, And trust him for the rest.

A Good Yarn.

In the village of W., lived a man who had once been a Judge of the county and well known all over it by the name of Judge L. He kept a store and saw mill and was always sure to have the best of the bargain on his side, by which means he had gained an ample fortune; and some did not hesitate to call bim the biggest rascal in the world. He was very conceited, withall, and used to brag of his business capacity, when any one was near to listen. One rainy day as quite a number were seated around the store, he began as usual, to tell of his great bargains, and at last wound up with the expression:

'Nobody has ever cheated me, nor they can't neither."

"Judge," said an old man of the company, "I've cheated you more than you ever

"How so," said the Judge, "If you will promise you wont go to law bout it, nor do anything, I'll tell you; or else I won't, you'r too much of a law char-

"Let's hear!" cried half a dozen voices I'll promise," said the Judge, "and treat bargain if you have.'

Well, do you remember that wagon you robbed me of?' "I never robbed you of any wagon I only got the best of the bargain," said the Well, I made up my mind, to have it back and-'You never did," interrupted the cute

"Yes I did, and interest too." "How so?" thundered the now enraged

"Well, you see Judge, I sold you one day a very nice pine log, and bargained with you for a lot more. Well; that log I stole off your pile down by the mill the night before, and the next day I sold it to you

"The next night I drew it back home, and sold it to you the next day, and so I kept on until you had bought your own log of me twenty-seven times!' "That's a lie!" exclaimed the infuriated Judge, running to his book and examining his log accounts; "you never sold me twenty-seven logs of the same measure-

"I know it," said the vender in logs, "by drawing it back and forth, the ends wore I drew it home again and worked it up into shingles, and the next week you bought the shingles, and I concluded I had got the in my pocket book."

The palindrome is a line that reads alike backward and forward. One of the best is Adam's first observation to Eve: "Madam, 'm Adam." Another is the story that Na-Poleon, when at St. Helena, being asked by an Englishman if he could have sacked London, replied, "Able was I ere I saw Elha,"—the best palindrome, probably in the language.

Coon Fight.

A coon fight is one of the glories of life in Kentucky. The programme is this: Some one announces to the gentlemen planters of an extended neighborhood that he will give | For 1867 and previous years. a barbecue and coon fight on a certain day, at such a place, and they are invited to bring themselves, their friends and their dogs, for his coon is a veteran, and will make a big fight. This brings a large gathering of men and dogs to enjoy the feast and the fight. The coon is placed in a barrel with one head out, laid flat, so that he cannot be taken on the flank or rear, and the dog that brings out the coon-and it takes one of pluck to do that-wins the bet.

On the occasion to be described, a large party assembled with numerous fine dogs, eager for the fray. The sport began-but every dog of the party was whipped out by the sharp teeth and claws of the gallant 176 coon. As a matter of course there was a noi- 186 sy clamor and some thorough swearing at the result. There was a seedy Yankee present, looking on with a grin of delight, as each defeated dog gave up the battle. He had with him a miserable yellow cur, which went sneaking about with its tail between its legs, snapping and shying at every dog that offered tokens of friendly introduction.

In the midst of the uproar, Yankee quiet-

Wal, gentlemen, I think I have got a dog that will bring 'cout that 'ere coon.' "Where is he? Where is he? Bring him out," shouted a score of witnesses. "There he is!" pointing to the misera-

There was a general laugh, and immediate ffers of bets in any quantity. 'Wal, gentlemen, I hain't got much mon-

After a great deal of coaxing and pulling, the mongrel was hauled close to the mouth of the barrel. The Yankee, after patting and calling his doz pet names for a minute, suddenly seized him, and thrust him into the barrel, stern first. The next instant, with an agonized yelp, out came the coon, too-fastened by tooth and claw to the haunches of the fleeing dog. The screams that tollowed may not be described. "I guess I'll take that 'ere money and quietly remarked Mr. Vankee, and

She Wouldn't Marry a Mechanic.

·A young man commenced visiting a young women, and appeared to be well pleased One evening he called when it was quite late, which led the young lady to enquire where he had been.

"I had to work to-night." "What! do you work for a living?" she inquired in astonishment. 'Certainly," replied the young man, 'I am a mechanic."

"I dislike the name of mechanic," and she turned up her pretty nose.
