Animals That Chew the Cud. Ruminating animals gather their food rapidly, give it a few cuts with the teeth, and swallow it. It goes to an interior receptacle where it is moistened ; this is very essential if it be dry hay. When the animal has filled himself, he masticates the food thus stowed away in the stomach, raising it cud by cud. When a portion is completely masticated it passes to another receptacle, and the process of digestion goes on. Thus an ox, if left to himself, will raise and masticate all his food thus stowed away in his stomach. If he be pushed and worked hard, and does not have time to masticate, he falls off in flesh, his health is poor, his digestion is incomplete. The horse, on the contrary, however much in a hurry he may be, must masticate each mouthful before he swallows it. A hnngry ox let into a meadow will fill himself in twenty minutes, while a horse would want at least an honr and twenty minutes to take the same amount of grass. The ox, deer, sheep, goat, chamois and rabbit, being the natural prey of ferocious beasts, are endowed with the extra stomach in which hastily to stow away the food without mustication. This may perhaps be regarded as a wise provision of nature, enabling them to sally forth where food is plenty, and in a short time fill themselves and retire to a place of safety to ruminate their food at their pleasure.

KEEPING FOWLS IN ORCHARDS.-The public has yet to learn the full advantage of keeping poultry. Few seem to appreciate what they may do among trees in an orchard. Let any one try them in an orehard of a quarter of an acre, where they may be kept by a picket fence four or five feet high, put- Has just received and op med, at the above namting in, say one hundred and twenty-five fowls, and observe the result. He will avoid the annoyance in the garden, of which so many complain, while they will work among the trees, doing just what is needed. keeping the ground well cultivated and destroying everything that can injure the fruit trees in the shape of bugs, worms or other insects, and lay a large number of eggs. which are a cash article, to say nothing of the chickens, which pay well for raising at the present timy.

I have tried it and know it is so. I have about one hundred fouls, which have worked admirably among the trees, keeping the ground in good condition, keeping off the insects and promoting the growth of the orchard. I am satisfied that we have yet to learn the full benefit which may be derived from the proper arranement of fowls, and it is quite possible that the method which I have suggested may offer the best way of getting our apple orchards into bearing condition again .- Cor.
