for the farmer.

GATHERING FRUIT .- The appearance and value of fruit depend very much upon when and how it is gathered.

Peaches should be left on the trees until fully ripe, and then gatherd carefully with basket or box in which they are to be marketed. If the bloom is rubbed off the peach by rough handling, its beauty of appearance is injured and it will decay much sooner than if untouched. Formerly it was supposed that the peach must be gathered before ripe in order to ship it any distance ; but practical experience has proved that ripe fruit not quite soft, will carry just as well as unripe, and command a much better price. Pears and apples should never be picked from the tree by breaking the stems. Unless the stem will separate freely from the tree, the fruit is not ripe ; it will neither eat nor cook good, and is only fit for those who want a touch of cholery morbus. Apples, as soon as gathered may be sent direct to market; but nearly every variety of pear is improved in appearance and quality by keeping in close dark drawers, wrapped in flannel or soft paper, or packed in bran a ew days.

For profit, and in or ler to obtain the highest price, all fruit pays to be assorted into two or more grades. A few scattering large berries, apples or pears, in a quart or a bushel, do not assist in advancing the price; but if carefully packed by themselves will bring the highest price, and often induce the dealer to buy the small fruit in order to get the large.

Large horses are generally most admired by farmers; but farmers are most admired who pony up.
