

For the Farmer.

GREASING WAGONS.—Says an exchange: "But few people are aware that they do wagons and carriages more injury by greasing too plentifully, than in any other way. A well made wheel will endure common wear from ten to twenty-five years, if care is taken to use the right kind and proper amount, of grease; but if this matter is not attended to, they will be used up in five or six years. Lard should never be used on a wagon, for it will penetrate the hub and work its way out around the tenons of the spokes, and spoil the wheel. Tallow is the best lubricator for wood axle-trees, and castor oil for iron. Just grease enough should be applied to the spindle of a wagon to give it a light coating; this is better than more, for the surplus put on will work out at the ends, and be forced by the shoulder bands and nut washers into the hub around the outside of the boxes. To oil an axle-tree, first wipe the spindle clean with a cloth wet with spirits of turpentine, and then apply a few drops of castor oil near the shoulder and end. One tea-spoonful is sufficient for the whole."

We would add that, for journals on which there is a heavy pressure, it is a good plan to mix with the oil some lamp black of common sort; powdered plum-bago, or black lead, is also employed for the same purpose.—Prairie Farmer.

CORN BREAD.—One quart of corn meal, one pint of wheat flour, two eggs, and a little salt, with sour buttermilk sufficient to make a stiff batter. Mix thoroughly, and then add one tea-spoonful of soda, dissolved in a very little hot water. Stir this in and pour into well-greased pans, sufficient to be one and a half inches thick when cooked. Place in a hot oven, and bake until done, say half an hour. Carry to the table hot. If all should not be used, bake over again, and it is about as good as when first baked.

Half a pint of flour and one egg will be very good, but not quite as good as the above.

The sourer the buttermilk the better, if it is not bitter. Success depends very much on the due proportion of acid and alkali.

Fine meal makes much better bread than coarse. If it does not keep as well, provide less at one time. Dent, or gourd-seed corn makes better meal than flint corn.

Some people are shocked at the idea of eating drugs with their food, and exclaim against the use of alkali in cooking. Let such consider that acid neutralizes the caustic property of the alkali; and if they never eat anything more unhealthy than that, they will do well.

Live stock, of all kinds, should have the owner's daily supervision. If others do the work, his eyes should see that it is well done. Few hired men can be trusted to do things constantly according to directions. In the very cold weather there is a constant temptation to consult his own case rather than the comfort of the animals entrusted to his care. Feed and water regularly. Keep salt within reach of horses, cattle and sheep. A large lump of rock salt is best for this purpose. If they can lick when they please, they will not take it in excess.

BREAD PUDDING.—Take light white bread, and cut in thin slices. Put into a pudding mould, shape a layer of any sort of preserves, then a slice of bread, and repeat until the mould is almost full. Pour over all a pint of warm milk in which four well beaten eggs have been mixed; cover the mould with a piece of linen, place in a sauce pan with a little boiling water, let it boil twenty minutes, and serve with pudding sauce.

By Weight.—In California berries are sold by the pound, as they should be everywhere. Early strawberries, says the California Farmer, brought fifty cents per pound this year.

It is said that Bonner feeds his horses from a box setting on the floor, as he believes it is natural for them to take their food from a level with their feet.

A countryman at the Astor, the other day, after tasting some olives, wanted to whip the waiter for pouring salt on "them plums."
