

For the Farmer.

How To Raise Poultry.

A ton of poultry at only fifteen cents per pound will bring the handsome little sum of $300. Almost every farmer in the country might raise from half a ton to a ton every season about as well as not.

But whatever may be the kind of poultry raised, in order to meet with satisfactory success, it is better to commence in autumn or the fore part of winter. All kinds of fowls require protection from the rigors of our Northern winters, as protection from intense cold during winter is absolutely essential to the prolificacy of all fowls.

How to Boil Potatoes. The discussion took a culinary turn, touching the proper method of cooking potatoes for the table. It was stated that as soon as potatoes have been boiled until they are nearly soft, the water should be poured out of the kettle, and the potatoes allowed to cook a few minutes in a heated kettle without hot water.

CAMPOR CERATE.—Take one and a half ounces of spermaceti, half an ounce of white wax, and scrape into a little earthen pot; add six drachms of powdered camphor, and pour on the whole four tablespoonfuls of the best olive oil.

GUINEA FOWLS.—These fowls, when a number of hens are together, it is said, will lay their eggs in one place till the instinct of setting begins to operate, when each will make a nest, or sometimes two will club together in laying and setting.

Working horses, when in the stable, are better without a blanket than with it. When driven hard and standing out the blanket should be used.

Flax seed occasionally given to horses or cattle, will make them shed their old hair—and whether old or young, soon get sleek and fat. It is the only thing which will fatten some old horses. So says an exchange.
