for the farmer.

PRUNING.—Between the first of March and the first of May is a period during which a great deal of heavy pruning is done in the orchards of New England. Universal custom, however, in this respect, as sometimes elsewhere, is at variance with what is the best practice; for it is a well established theory that none but absolutely necessary pruning ought to be undertaken so late toward or into the sp.ing that wounds made thereby will bleed. This bleeding exhausts the energies of a tree, and the wounds where it takes place rarely heal over satisfactorily. A penknife is strong enough for any pruning where trees are properly cared for. Heavy pruning, made necessary by neglect, as is too often the case may be best performed-all considered-during the six weeks preceding December 1; but cautiously always when the wood is frozen. Light pruning is most satisfactory in its results when done in the latter part of June. The heading in of a tree transplanted in the spring is justifiable because the diminished root of the tree cannot always sustain the quantity of wood which it could have sustained had the tree not been removed. Wounds of an inch or more in diameter made in pruning ought to be pared smooth, and then covered with something to protect them from the weather. Gum-shellac dissolved in alcohol to the consistency of molasses, coal tar, graftingwax, common house paint, all answer a good purpose, the latter perhaps being prefferable to any of the others. Where paint is used, by throwing a little dry sand or loam upon it while fresh, the costing and its color are both improved. - Worcester Spy.

Horse Shoeing. - No person should ever allow his horse to be shod by a farrier who employs, or keeps in his shop, the knife used for cutting away the hoof, shaped like a small shovel, and usually braced against the shoulder when used in shoveling away the born. The Almighty designed the frog as an elastic, insensable cushion, on which the horse should walk, as does the fowl and other animals; yet blacksmiths delight in cutting away this most useful part, and thereby expose that which is sensible to contact with the hard road. No greater folly can be immagined, and to a reasonable man it only requires to be noticed to make the error self-apparent. The blacksmith will argue that he must "cut away the rags," and some are so ignorant as to declare they cut away the frog "to prevent pressure on it," that is to say, they cut it away to prevent the very object of its creation. The frog should never be cut, or any portion; if allowed to take its natural course it becomes a perfect safety-stand and protection to the foot. In colts the frog may be seen in its full vigor and usefulness; but at the first shoeing the knife goes to work, and so it continues whilst there is any frog to cut. -Pub. Royal Society.

CARD THE COWS .- One would think that a kind hearted man, when he sees how grateful this operation is to a cow, would be willing to spend a few moments in carding her. It pays as well to clean a cow as a herse. All who have fairly tried it find great benefit from the operation. And not one farmer in a hundred makes it a practice to use the card or curry comb in the cow stable. We know stupid men who laugh at the idea as a mere notion of some fancy farmer. But, in point of fact, no cow can give the best results at the pail unless this matter is attended to, especially in winter.

Oil cloth should never be wetted-if it can possibly be avoided-but merely to be rubbed with a flannel, and polished with a brush of moderate hardness, exactly like a mahogany table, and by this simple means the fading of the colors, and the rotting of the canvass, which are inevitably attendant upon the oil cloth being kept in a state of moisture or dampness, are entirely avoided.

POLKA GINGERBREAD.-To a pint of molasses add a pound of butter, a pound of brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of pounded ginger, half a teaspoonful of pearlash, and as much flour as will knead it into a stiff paste. Roll it out very thin and cut it into cakes; bake on tin sheets in a quick oven. Litron pared thin may be added, and any spice you may fancy.
