for the farmer.

our bed chambers, in the unconscious happiness of our sleep, and as good health is impossible without the habitual breathing of inhaling pare air is self-evident. No sleep can be sound and healthful unless the per son is comfortably warm; and many a man with a mortal malady, or one involving life long suffering, by having been exposed to a draught of air upon some part of the body while asleep, either a broken pane, or an SILKS, unstopped crevice.

Three things, then, are indispensible to the healthfulness of a bed chamber: we must be comfortably warm, must not be exposed to draughts of air, must be supplied with a pure air, not very cold. A great deal has been said about sleeping with windows skyhigh, so as to let in all out of doors; none but monomaniaes or born fools write thus we know that many persons have met their deaths by means of an open window exposing them to a sudden change in the weather during the night; and certainly the safe side is the best.

In clod weather there should be a fire in an open fire place all night, and air enough will come in at the crevices of the doors and windows to create a current, driving the bad air up the chimney. In summer, lamp or candle may be burned standing in the fire-place unless the door of the hall is left open; but as most persons, at least in cities, do not feel safe to sleep with an open window or door, the lamp is a good substitute. A window may be hoisted, but there are comparatively so few nights in the year to make it safe to do so that the fire or an open inner door is preferable. There is no advantage in going to bed or undress ing in a cold room; all invalids and sedentary persons should undress, sleep, and arise in a rooom not lower than fifty degrees; and if it was seventy while rising so much bet ter. The old, the sedentary and the cickly should sleep on feather beds in cold weather; if they sleep on matrasses it often requires so much bed-clothing to keep them breathing, and so confines the foul air above daughters cross, and enriching the doctor and apothecary.

CURE POR EAR ACHE- Take a small piece of cotton batting or cotton wool, make a depression with the finger, and fill it up with as much ground pepper as will rest on a five cent piece; gather it into a ball and tie it up; dip the ball into sweet oil, insert it in the ear, covering the latter with the cotton wool, and use a bandage or cap to retain it in its place. Almost instant relief will be experienced, and the application is so gentle that an infant will not be injured by it, but experience relief as well as adults.

PREVENTIVE OF COLD FEET. - Let a layer of curled hair be basted to a piece of cloth and slipped in the stocking; the hair touching the soles of the feet, will titillate the skin and draw blood thither. The bair conducts the moisture from the feet to the woolen cloth and thus keeps them dry. These hair soles should be placed before the fire at night so as to be thoroughly dried by morn ing. Cork soles absorb moisture from the shoe and the feet also, and require several days to be thoroughly dried.

FEA Sour .- A pint and a half of split peas, two small onions, pepper and salt to taste. Use three quarts of water and boil from five to six hours. Pork is often put in, but it makes the soup far less wholesome. If the water is hard, add a piece of saleratus not larger than a pea. It would be difficult to find a way in which the same amount of nourishment could be obtained for four times what this costs. - Hearth and Home

To Cleanse Blankers .-- Put two large tablespoonfuls of borax and a pint bowl of soft soap into a tub of cold water. When dissolved, put in a pair of blankets and let them remain over night. Next day rub and drain them out, and rinse thoroughly in two waters, and hang them to dry. Do not

TOAST WATER .- Toast slowly a thin piece of bread till quite brown and hard, but not the least black, plunge in cold water, and cover it over an hour before used. This is very servicable for weak bowels. It should
