for the farmer.

Thorough Tillage. A correspondent of the Germantown Tellegraph says: I have made it a rule in my cultivation of all plants to disturb the surface, break the crust around them as quickly as possible after every summer shower. The plants must have good opportunity to breathe. It makes no difference whether weeds have made their appearance or not. The fact is, weeds are a blessing in disguise. There are thousands of farmers who would never plow a crop were they not fearful of the dreadful weeds. Weeds or no weeds. it is necessary to stir the ground often to make the crop grow. Now, let those who think they must necessarily have weeds as an incentive to action examine the soil closely twenty four hours after a summer shower. Weeds by the million may be seen ; small to be sure, therefore easy to kill. Then is the time to take advantage of them.

I never produced a better crop of corn than during the summer just past. Being so unfortunate as to have a small farm of poor land, if I plant the large Dent corn which produces so bountifully on our rich Muskingum bottoms, a tolerably good sized stalks is produced, minus the ear. Therefore, I have bred a variety which will produce an ear every time in proportion to the size of the stalk. If the stalk is no thicker than your thumb it will have its ear of Here is a point that I wish to impress on your readers, that the variety of corn should be selected with especial reference to the quality of the soil. It is nnreasonable to expect the large varieties to succeed on thin soils. On our rich bottoms at four feet each way the ground is densely covered. On my thin upland at three feet each way, with a light-stalked, early variety, it is no more densely seeded.

Now, as to the mode of tillage I have adopted. I hold that more good can be executed by passing ence between the rows every five days than to pass twice through each space at a ploughing every ten days. And to ensure the passage of the implement-as is always desirable-in close proximity to the plants on each side of the rows, I take sides in rotation, thus: First cultivation, hold the implement to the north side of every row, second, hold it to the south side ; third, hold it to the west side ; fourth hold it to the cast side. In this manner a large surface can be disturbed in a day, at least six acres. Of course a man can till twice as much as by the old plan, and indue time each side of every hill will have its Have just opened a large and most complete stock Value and Culture of Apples.

By no other process, in my opinion, can so much nutriment be so cheaply extracted from four square rods of ground as by planting an apple tree in the centre, and giving it good cultivation.

Apples need the ground, the whole of it, and all it contains, but "immemorial usage" allows an apple tree no rights that husbandmen are bound to respect; it is haggled and mangled, roots and branches, and the soil exhausted in the production of other crops. Charging the apples with the ground they actually grow upon and appropriate, they generally give far better returns as food for man or beast than corn, wheat or potatoes.

New York, particularly western New for fruit. If a better apple country was ever made, I confess I never heard of it. We occupy the precise position where the tree is hardy and healthy, and the fruit comes nearest perfection.

I know of no ordinary farm crop that at all compares, during a series of years, with apples, if we take into account the small expense at which they are raised. Should we reduce the yield to one half barrel to the tree, apples would still be our most profitable crop.

I boldly claim that the average of our orchards could be doubled by good cultiva-

An acre of ground that will produce forty barrels of good truit, ought to be excused from growing grain. Whatever grain or root crops are grown upon it, detract doubtless more than they are worth from the apple crop. We cannot, without great expense and trouble, return to the soil all the elements which our wheat, corn and potatoes take from it. When I hear of trees standing near a wood pile, in the corner of fence, near the barn, or the hog pen, or the kitchen door, I am prepared for a big yield. The great majority of our apple trees are either starved or go very hungry .- H. T.
