The Way to Blanket Horses. But few persons comparatively understand how to apply a blanket to a horse to prevent him from contracting a cold. We frequently see the blanket folded double and across the rump and part of the animal's back, leaving those parts of the body which need protection entirely exposed to the cold.

Those parts of the body of a horse which surround the lungs require the benefit of a blanket in preference to its flanks and rump. When we are exposed to a current of cold air, to guard against any injury from contracting cold, we shield our shoulders, neck, chest and back. If these parts be protected the lower part of the body will endure a degree of cold far more intense, without any injury to the body, than if the lungs were not kept warm with suitable covering. The same thing holds good in the protection of horses. The blanket should cover the neck, withers and shoulders, and be brought around the breast and buttoned or buckled together as closely as a man buttons his overcoat when about to face a driving storm. Let the lungs of a horse be well protected with a heavy blanket, and he will seldom contract a cold, even if the hindmost parts of his body are not covered. Many of our best teamsters protect the breasts of their horses by a piece of cloth, about two feet SPEAR'S CALORIFIC, square, hanging down from the lower end of the collar. This is an excellent practice in cold weather, as the most important part of the animal is constantly sheltered from the cold wind, especially when traveling toward a strong current. The forward end of horse blankets should be made as closely around the breast of a borse as our garments fit our bodies. Most horses take cold as readily as men, if not blanketed while standing, after exercising sufficiently to produce perspiration. So long as the horse is kept in motion, there is little danger of his suffering from cold; but allow him to stand for a few minutes, without a blanket to protect hi shoulders and lungs, and he will take cold sooner than men .- Exchange

A NEW INSECT DESTROYER. - M. Cloez, who is engaged at the garden of the Paris Museum, has invented what he considers a complete annihilator for plant lice and other small insects. This discovery is given in the Revue Horticole, with the endorsement of its distinguished editor, E. M. Carriere. To reduce M. Cloez's preparations to our measures, it will be sufficiently accurate to say, take three and a half ounces of quassia S sale at chips, and five drachms of stavesacre seeds. pints of water, and boiled until reduced to five pints. When the liquid is cool; strain it, and use with a watering pot or syringe, as may be most convenient. We are assured that this preparation has been most efficacious in France, and it will be worth while Quassia has long been used as an insect destroyer. The stavesacre seeds are the seeds of a species of larkspur, or delphinium and used to be kept in the old drug stores. Years ago they were much used for an insect that found its home in the human head; but, as that has fortunately gone out of fashion, it may be that the seeds are less attainable than formerly. The stavesacre seeds contain delphine, which is one of the most active poisons known, and we have no doubt that a very small portion of it would prove fatal to insects. - Scientific
