To CLEAN A RUSTY PLOW .- Put a quart of water into a stone vessel and pour very slowly into it a pint of sulphuric seid. (The mixture will become quite warm from chemical action, and this is the reason why the acid should be poured into the water rather than the water into the acid) Wash the mould board (or any other iron that is rusty) with this weak acid, and let it remain on the iron until it evaporates. Then wash it again. The object is to give time for the acid to dissolve the rust. Then wash with water and you will see where the worst rusty spots are. Apply some more acid and rub the spots with a brick. The acid and the scouring will remove most of the rust. Then wash samples sent free by mail on application.

MASURY & WHITON. the mould-board thoroughly with water to remove all the acid, and rub it dry. Brush it over with petroleum or other oil, and let it be until spring. When you go to plowing, take a bottle of the acid water to the field and apply it every other bout to any spots of rust that may remain. The acid and the scouring of the earth will soon make it perfeetly bright and smooth. If all iron work be washed over with petroleum as soon as we put our tools, implements and machines aside for the winter, it will keep them from rusting, and save a great deal of trouble and and loss.

LICE ON Hogs. - In answer to a recent inquiry for a remedy for lice on hoge, allow me to say that I have had an experience of 12 years with breeding hogs. The past five years I have used the following, which will clean off the lice in two days. Put about one gill of kerosene oil into an old dish, and with a paint brush or old woolen rag rub the oil up and down the back of the animals and behind the fore leg and on the flank. Be not destroyed, will hatch out in about five be plainly seen, being about the size of timothy seed and lying close to the skin fast to the hair. No one need fear to use the oil in the least. Hot water will not kill these lice CLOTHING! CLOTHING! for I have seen them crawl after the hog had been scalded in a barrel after being butchered.-R. Woodruff.

Young cattle ought to have a warm, dry, sunny shed and yard to lie in by day, and to be put up in an inner, closed stable by night. A very little grain or cut and soaked corn fodder will keep them growing well, sleek and healthy; and thus kept, they may be rock, which is now not surpassed by any estab wintered much cheaper than in a bleak stock yard, on uncut cornstalks.

Oats should be bruised for an old horse but not for a young one. Because the former, through age and defective teeth, cannot chew them properly; the young horse can do so, and they are thus properly mixed with the saliva, and turned into wholesome nu-
