

For the Farmer.

SEEDLING PLANTS.—The law of nature is such, that the opportunity for the selection and consequent improvement of seeds and plants is almost infinite, and one great source of improvement is in cultivating seedling plants, bulbs, roots, or tubers, by which new varieties are very often obtained, superior in many respects. The seeds of plants will not produce a growth precisely like the original stock, owing to the cause that the pollen from several varieties of the same plant, will mix and establish a new variety. As, for instance, take the potato, strawberry, apple, pea, etc., and observe how much they have improved in size and flavor by propagation from seedling plants. The strawberry has so much improved in size and sweetness, that the original has been lost sight of, and is rarely or never cultivated, and the potato, from its primitive state, an insignificant, tasteless root, has progressed to excellent farinaceous, succulent, of which we have thousands of new varieties, and every day more are produced from the bolls of seeds, of superior excellence. By sowing the seeds of apples and pears, hundreds of new varieties are brought into existence, many of which are very superior fruit, and superseded many in cultivation. In fact nearly all our best fruits are from seedling plants, and every new fruit of superior quality propagated, is only preparing the way for future crops of fruits of greater value, and which will amply reward, by their superior excellence, the labor bestowed upon them.

PLOWING, WAGONS, &c.—It should be a rule that the traces to the gears of a team should be as short as possible, without impeding the freedom of the step of the horses, for the nearer they are to the point of draft, the less force will be required to draw the plow. The tallest horse should walk in the furrow to keep the doubletree as level as possible, and the team must be kept going at as regular and smart a gait as the nature of the work will admit; they are thus better managed, and the draft will be lighter than if walking slow, and by due attention to this particular, heavy soil will cling less to the plow, and the operation will seem pleasant and free. There is a certain taste in plowing, as well as many other things, a sort of tact acquired by instinct, and a slight movement of the hands will keep the plow right, while a swerving, clumsy plowman, without perception will be constantly letting the plow, with every unsteady movement of the horses, run out and into land, and make bad work.

A POUND OF FLESH.—An English chemist and agriculturist has calculated that to obtain a pound of flesh on domestic animals, the following qualities of either of the various kinds of food mentioned below must be used: Turnip, 100 pounds; potatoes, 50 pounds; carrots, 50 pounds; milk, 25 pounds; oat meal, 9 pounds; corn meal, 84 pounds; barley meal, 74 pounds; peas, 34 pounds; and beans, 34 pounds.
