for the farmer.

Market Gardening in the Country. The census often shows the drift of farm life more accurately than any partial observation, however minute. It is quite clear, from the returns already examined, that there is a decrease in the amount of live stock in the New England and Middle States during the past decade, and likewise a decerase in the yield of staple grains, while there will be shown a large increase in the crops of vegetables and in garden products. This shows pretty conclusively that grain farming and live stock raising does not pay so well as some other branches of farming. The city and village population has increased, and the farmers in the immediate vicin. ity of these large towns are turning their attention more and more to supplying their daily wants. They can sell potatoes and turnips every day in the year if they have them, and garden products all through the summer and fall. There is, however, a brisk demand for poultry, eggs, milk, calves, lambs and swine, and they very properly raise what the market demands.

SAFETY REIN .- A correspondent of the Country Gentleman gives a plan for a simple safety rein, for use on hard pulling horses. A common jointed snaffle bit is used, but on it are placed two loose rings, not large enough to slip over the outer rings on the bit. To these loose rings the check pieces of the bridle are fastened, the outer rings being used only for the driving reins, which pass through them and are fastened at the top of the head. It will be seen that pulling on the rein by the driver, draws the bit up in the mouth, pressing it against the fork of the lips, and throws the head up instead of against the breast. The correspondent says he has used this contrivance with success for three years on a mare which had repeatedly run away before with a strong

A CORRESPONDENT of the Ohio Farmer thinks that one great cause of failure which often occurs in the cultivation of sorghum. is planting the seed too deep. The land should be mellow to a good depth, but the seed should be covered shallow.

A CORRESPONDENT of Tilton's journal says that a liberal top-dressing of old leached ashes produced "a magical effect" on his bed of young strawberry plants set some months before, and they grew finely after having been long stationary from drouth.

BRAN BREAD. - Take a sponge of wheat flour; when it is light add salt, and a small quantity of molasses, stirring in bran flour with a spoon until it is as stiff as you can get it without taking the hands to it. When it has risen again, put it into well greased pans with the spoon, and bake until done.
