

The Man who Could not Fight.

ASSEMBLY OF INDIAN PRINCES IN ARKANSAS LIFE. The beautiful little town of Van Buren, on the Arkansas river, near the Cherokee line, during its early history, was famous for the number and ferocity of its desperadoes, being the principal meridian and focus of rendezvous for gamblers, Indian traders, and all sorts of adventures who had found it necessary to change their domicile from lands governed by the administration of a rigid criminal code.

At this period Thomas A. Meyers emigrated to Arkansas, and opened a large grocery store in Van Buren, acting himself as the keeper and retailer. Such an occupation at that time required a man of the most determined courage, as the store had always a back room or shed attached, specially appropriated to gambling both by day and night, and where the players were supplied with the choicest of liquors, and would be sure to bully the grocer out of his reasonable charges unless they were restrained by fear.

For awhile, however, Meyers succeeded admirably. The half-breeds, loafers, and "chartered fighters," as they called themselves, held a caucus, and unanimously voted that the new arrival was a dangerous subject and had better be left alone. This verdict was altogether owing to the stranger's personal appearance, as militarily as might well be conceived. Tall, mainly symmetrical in shape, with great endowments both of strength and agility, he would have had few equals in a fair contest with the arms of naked nature.

At length a terrible affray occurred in Meyers's grocery. Half a dozen fine arms exploded in quick succession, and the deafening roar so frightened the keeper that he fairly took to his heels and fled from his own establishment. The fact settled public opinion as to his character. "What a chicken-hearted coward, to run from his cattle!" exclaimed General Cole, the Napoleon of frontier duellists and gamblers.

"Why, he hasn't the spunk of a dead possum!" hissed Bill Green, the dandy loafer, combing his perfumed "soap locks" with his long rosy nails. "Let's drink his liquor and smoke his cigars, and he's a coward for them, because as how he's a coward," said Jack Warhawk, a huge half-breed; and having enunciated this cathemene of genuine Cherokee logic, Jack leaped over the counter and began to fill glasses and hand out cigars crying—"Toast to the brave, my boys! We'll never want while the world has chickens of the white feather."

The firing in the grocery having ceased for more than an hour, being replaced by a din of the most boisterous mirth, Meyers by a great effort, mustered the spirit to return. He found the customers helping themselves with a vengeance, and thought to overawe them by the assumption of heroic airs. He snatched his revolver from his pocket, and pointing it at Warhawk's breast, ordered him to leave his house. "If that's what you're arter," shouted Jack ensheathing his Big Bowie, and springing back over the counter. "Here's what will give you a lade-full."

Meyers still kept his revolver presented; but his hand shook like a leaf in the tempest, his very lips grew white with terror and his trembling feet involuntarily retreated backwards by short quivering steps. The two feelings, physical fear and moral courage, were struggling for the mastery. He was endeavoring to act bravely. His will was brave, but his nerves refused their concurrence, and he remained, so to speak, in equipoise—totally incapable of acting at all. He was impotent to fight, and as powerless to fly.

and outrage. The loafers would pull his nose for mere amusement; the half-breeds would spit in his face to make him treat; and General Cole, when intoxicated, would strike him with his cane to cure him of his cowardice, as he said. The poor grocery-keeper brooked all these gross indignities with the patience of a martyr, and would sometimes meekly remonstrate. "Gentlemen, it is ungenerous to abuse me thus, for I confess that I have no courage. I cannot fight."

This continued for a whole year, when a change occurred that caused the insults of Meyers to run their ignoble persecutions. He had a young and beautiful wife, whom he loved with the tenderest passion. One day, when his husband was absent, the hideous half-breed Jack Warhawk, instigated to the damning deed by the persuasion of General Cole, went to the grocery-keeper's private residence, and maltreated his lady in the most shameful manner.

Meyers returned home to find his beloved one drowned, as it were, in tears. He heard the harrowing tale without any external manifestations of extraordinary emotion. His face it is true, became somewhat pale; his lip quivered an instant, and then settled to an expression rigid as a mouth of iron; and his wild black eye, it may be, shot a few more beams of penetrating fire; but he did not rave or utter curses. He uttered a whisper of menace; he did not even condescend or sympathize with his afflicted wife. He only armed himself with that Bowie knife fourteen inches in the blade from hilt to point, and started for the village.

He came within sight of his enemy, then promenaing the public square and boasting of his villainous achievement. At this vision Meyers's lip curled into a horrid smile and his dark eye melted in a stream of tears. He approached till he stood nearly touching the half-breed, and then said, in a shrill, hissing whisper—"Wretch, be quick! Draw, for on this spot one of us must die!"

And he waited till the other should be ready for the strike on equal terms. He did not have to wait long, for Jack, understanding that cold, glittering, snaky, smile and those hot, gushing tears, as the certain tokens of murderous madness, immediately unsheathed at the same moment with his adversary, and they began the dreadful combat, which, indeed, was soon decided. Meyers parried three furious blows of the half-breed, and then, grasping his foe's clothing with his left hand, with his right plunged his knife up to the hilt in his heart. The Cherokee expired without a groan.

And now the inward and terrible passions of Meyers found vent in appalling explosions. His curses were fearful to hear; he spurned his fallen enemy with his foot, and wished aloud that he had a hundred lives, so that he might himself enjoy the pleasure of killing him a hundred times over. His wrath then changed to his other insulter. He flew at the latter, Bill Green, and tore out his "soap locks" by handfuls. He sprung upon General Cole, and pulled his nose till it was flattered between his fingers—all the while that gory knife dripping with blood in his right hand! His enemies were so taken by surprise, terror-stricken, stupefied, that for a space they seemed utterly incapable of voluntary motions.

The coward had suddenly become braver than the bravest. The equipoise of feelings was destroyed forever; the sheer power of pure will had conquered his fear! Does any one doubt our strange story? Let him address a letter of inquiry to the Hon. G. W. Paschel, of Van Buren, late a judge of the Supreme Court of Arkansas, and the fullest confirmation can be obtained.

But the tragedy did not end with the death of the half-breed; a greater victim was required to complete the expiation. On the same evening Gen. Cole called a special council of his friends to consult on the course he should pursue. There was but one opinion—that, as he had been insulted by a direct and gross public indignity, he must call his foe to the field of honor, accordingly, on the following morning a challenge was dispatched, which Meyers promptly accepted, and fixed the time at noon of the same day—the weapons to be double-barreled shot guns—distance ten paces!

The parties met on the sand beach under the bank of the river above the village, and hundreds collected to witness the issue. The mortal beligerents were placed in position by their seconds, and the death-dealing guns—enormous double barrels—rested with dark yawning muzzles on the sand, in their hands. The spectators were much astonished at the strong contrast exhibited by their appearance. Gen. Cole was an experienced duelist, who had shot his man before he was eighteen, and has often since been engaged in affairs of the kind. On the contrary, Meyers was little acquainted with the use of fire-arms, and had always hitherto been an uninitiated patron.

And yet singular to record, the duelist stood up, nervous, agitated, almost trembling, while the reputed coward was calm, firm, steady as a rock, with that appalling smile still curling on his lip, and a few scattered tear drops, gleaming in the sun, on his cheek!

Gen Cole's second gave the word—"Fire—one—two—three!" He needed not however; counted so many, for with the echo of the second "Fire," Meyers leveled his piece, quick as thought and touched trigger. There was an awful roar, and Gen. Cole the duelist, fell dead. His head was torn into fragments, pierced by twenty buckshot.

No one again ever called Meyers a coward in Arkansas—no one ever even thought the term, as his shadow gleamed by in the sunlight. He had taken his degrees in the college of desperation, and his diploma was written in blood. He became a politician of great popularity.

leader in that section of the State; was repeatedly elected to the legislature, where he acquired distinction by his talents, but still more by his fearless daring; and as he is said to be yet in the progress of ascension, having recently obtained the commission of a major general of militia, we may expect before long to see his name in the roll of members of Congress. Nature made him a coward; love for his insulted wife rendered him brave; and bravery has conferred honor.—Sunday Times.

Dr. J. C. Alister's Ointment.

FROM THE "READING EAGLE."—There was never, perhaps, a Medicine brought before the public, that has in so short a time won such a reputation as Dr. J. C. ALISTER'S OINTMENT FOR THE WORLD WIDE. Almost every person that has used it, speaks of it in terms of praise. It has been cured by it, of the most painful Rheumatism; another of the most distressing cases of the kind, a fourth of a case of the same kind, and it does not give immediate relief, in every case, it cures the disease, being applied outwardly. Another instance of the wonderful healing power possessed by this ointment, is the following: A gentleman, from a respectable firm of Manchester, in this county.
