

THE FARMER.

Facts for Farmers.

It is an error to plant seed from a State further South. In a cold season only the seed from a colder climate will ripen well.

Never keep your cattle short; few farmers can afford it. If you starve them they will starve you.

It will not do to hoe a great field for a little crop, or to mow 20 acres for two loads of hay.

Enrich the land and it will pay you for it. Better farm thirty acres well, than fifty acres by halves.

In dry pastures dig for water on the slope of a hill, springs are more frequently near the surface on a height than in a vale.

The foot of the owner is the best manure for land.

Cut bushes that you wish to destroy, in the summer, and with a sharp instrument—they will bleed freely and die.

Accounts should be kept detailing the expenses and products of each field.

When an implement is no longer wanted for the season, lay it carefully aside, but first let it be well cleaned.

Obtain good seed, prepare your ground well, sow early and pay very little attention to the moon.

Cultivate your own heart aright; remember that "whosoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Do not begin farming by building an extensive house, nor a spacious barn, till you have something to store in it.

Keep notes of remarkable events on your farm.

Recording even your errors will be of benefit.

Good fences make good neighbors.

The better animals can be fed, and the more comfortable they can be kept, the more profitable they are, and all farmers work for profit.

Sow clover deep, it secures it against the draught.

Cows well fed in winter, give more milk in summer.

When you see the fence down put it up, if it remains until to-morrow the cattle may get over.

What ought to be done to-day do it, for to-morrow it may rain.

Management of Hens.

Hens when properly attended, and supplied with good quarters, will lay as well in winter as in summer.

We have published many facts which justify this assertion. One winter we fed our hens well with water and grain but they had no extra care, and they did not lay well.

The next winter we gave extra attention, supplied them with various kinds of food, and generally with a warm breakfast of boiled potatoes, meal, &c., and they laid abundantly.

The eggs they laid in January were worth, at the market price, three times the amount they consumed.

These experiments were with the same hens, with the same disadvantage of being one year older the second year.

In an account of managing hens, from J. S. Sayward, Esq., of Bangor, he stated that 150 hens produced 1900 eggs in the cold month of January.

In a cold part of the country too.

Hens should have a warm house. It should face the south, and there should be glass to let in the sun.

The situation should be a dry one, and sheltered from the cold winds.

The house should be kept clean. The manure should be often removed, as the ammonia arising from it affects the eyes of the fowls and it produces various kinds of diseases.

The best way is to catch the manure on a floor under the roost, and remove it often, drying up the moisture on the floor with sawdust. The dung is used by tanners, who ten give a good price; it is also valuable for manure, being worth more than manure.

The house should be warm, yet well ventilated in mild weather.

PREVENTION OF MEAT BY FREEZING. Every body knows or ought to know, that meat will keep perfectly sweet so long as it remains frozen.

reasonable to suppose upon the acre laid off three feet each way with two stalks in a hill, that every three stalks, if well cultivated, would upon an average, produce 5 good ears, which would make 129 bushels.

The pine barrens of the south are said to be well adapted for the breeding of sheep; and it is proposed to convert them into extensive sheep tracks.
