

A BACHELOR'S BEVERAGE.

Fifty to-day! Fifty; little chance now of my having a wife and a house full of "little responsibilities," as Fanny Wright calls them.

These rules comprise in substance, the mode of culture of nearly all the wonderful corn crops which have been recorded. But it should be remembered, that these rules must be practiced in connection, in order to secure the best result, and especially that the third one must not be attempted without the former two, for we have known sad failures to result from close planting, where the ground was not well manured or plowed deep.

The amount of manure requisite, will of course depend much on the condition of the soil—whether recently manured, or in sod, &c., &c.; but we do not remember of having ever seen a crop of corn, that we thought was highly manured, if the manure was plowed in; though of course it may not be the wisest economy to manure a few acres very highly at the expense of other portions.

Deep Plowing, we are convinced, will be found of great advantage in our bottom lands; there by bringing up the surface, say two inches of fresh soil, while the manure and surface soil is buried at a greater depth than usual. Subsoil Plowing would also prove highly beneficial on the more compact and clayey bottoms.

The farmer is not properly estimated.—It is a lamentable fact that the farmer does not occupy that elevated position in society which his occupation justly entitles him to. He is looked upon as a being quite below the lawyer, physician, divine, artist, merchant and clerk.

What blindness, folly, and false philosophy is this! The result of these false premises, is that the "professions" are crowded to the starvation point; clerks not only go begging, but become beggars, or worse—thieves; merchants are multiplied, and good old fashioned labour appears to be going out of fashion.

While we would give all due honors to professions, the farmer, who is the producer of all, both in food and raiment, that adds to the comfort and sustenance of the human family, need not feel below the occupations that gain their support from the folly, pride, misery and wickedness of their fellow creatures.

Fatal Accident.—We are informed that on Sunday last a fatal accident occurred at one of the swings on the Wisconsin. Two young men got upon a swing and exerting themselves to the utmost, caused it to a very high elevation.

Raising Corn.

The Ohio Cultivator in answer to the inquiry of a correspondent how to raise a "big crop" of corn, gives the following general directions, expressed in four short rules thus:—

Manure liberally—plow deep—plant close—cultivate well.

New mode of raising Wheat.—An experiment has been tried in Iowa, where two bushels of wheat and one of oats were mixed and sown together in the fall, on one acre. The oats shot up rapidly, and were, of course cut down by the frost. They however, furnished a warm covering for the earth, and when the snow fell among the thick stalks and leaves, they kept it from blowing away. This covering prevented the winter-killing of the wheat, and the oats yielded a rich top-dressing for the crop the following spring. The result was—an abundant crop, while land precisely similar along side of it, and treated in the same manner with the exception of omitting the oats, was utterly worthless. Will some of our readers try this experiment the coming season, and give us an account of the results?
