THE POPE'S SPEECH.

We have only space to refer - as we do with great delight - to the rational and quiet progress of Liberty in Italy. Besides what the reader will peruse of the the Pope's opening speech, we have to state, on what we call official authority, that the Earl of Minto, a Cabinet Minister, be it remembered, has had two interviews with his Holiness, upon, fi is stated, the affairs of the Catholic Church in Great Britain and Ireland, as well as with a view to assure the Holy Father of the sympathies of the British people in his cause, and the determination of our Queen to support him against all the enemies of freedom and religion.

The (Paris) Univers publishes a letter from Rome of the 18th instant, giving an account of the opening of the Consulta .-At 9 o'clock. A. M., on the 15th, Cardinal Antonelli, President of the Consulta, and Monsignor Amici, its Vice President, with the twenty-four Provincial Deputies. arrived at the Quirinal, and took their places in the Hall of the Throne, which the Pope entered shortly afterward. His Holingss having taken his seat on the throne, the President addressed to him, in concise but suitable terms, in the name of all present, their homoge, and the assurance that they would endeavor, by all means in their power, to respond to the confidence of their sovereign.

The Pope replied in the following

"I thank you for your good intentions, and as regards the public welfare, I eshe good that since my elevation to the Charlestown and Cambridge—the great teem them of value. His Holiness, having pronounced these last words with some vivacity, and some heat, stopped a moment, and then resuming in his usual mild manner, continued that Col, Myers, of the Richmond tragein the following terms:

He is a rectitude of your intentions, have been printer by profession, and graduated at the known to me since the moment I proceeded to your election. Neither do those words apply to the majority of my subjects, for I am sure of their fidelity and their obedience. I know that the hearts of my subjects unite with mine in the love of order and of concord. But there exist, unfortunately, some persons (and though 000 by the sale of his lands in Virginia, duction, few, they still exist) who, having nothing to lose, love disturbance and revolt, and even abuse the concessions made to them. The Deputies were afterwards admitted to kiss the feet of the Pope, who, having risen, conferred upon them his benediction, and took leave of them in these words:

Proceed, with the blessings of Heaven, to commence your labors. May they prove fruitful in beneficial results, and conform able to the desires of my heart."

After an imposing ceremony and pro cession, the Deputies repaired to the Vatican and took their seats.

They then immediately elected a com mittee to draw up an address in reply to the Pope's speech, which was composed of Prince Odescalchi, and Messra. Minghetti, Paolucci, and Silvani. That committee baving retired to an adjoining hall, returned shortly afterward with the draught of that document, which obtained ful impression, which the reply of the Consuits had partly dispelled.

The Pope, yielding to the advice of Cordinal Amici, and it is believed, of Count Rossi, rejected the law on the press. prepared by M. Pietro Ferretti, brother of the Secretary of State. The Consulta had formed itself into sections. The legislative section was presi Inauguration of the Papal States, as a gen- ded over by M. Recchi; and that of war, public works, &c., by Prince Odescalchi.

There was no truth in the report that the Pope intended to suppress the Order of Jesusta Private letters from Rome of the 18th inst., held out the hope that the affair of please. Ferrara would be amicably and speedily adjusted. The Jewish residents of Rome had presented to the Pope as an acknowledgement of their humble gratitude for the blessings he had conferred upon them, a copy of the Bible splendidly bound and illuminated, which had cost upwards of 1.000 scudi.

Lord Minto had an audience of the Pope

Professor Retti had been re-instated as ensor-of the press. A fete was to take place on the 15th to celebrate the installation of the Council of State.

According to the last accounts, a good deal of disappointment was left in Rome because of some hesitation observed in the Government in respect to its proposed evatem of reform.
