

A CAUTION TO MERCHANTS.

We heard a good story of a sagacious country gentleman, who came to our city some days ago with a bill on a highly respectable firm of this city. The bill was duly presented for acceptance, & a young member of the firm, a fashionable, showily dressed gentleman, who had cultivated a very dainty mustache, wrote with a gold pen his endorsement on the bill, giving his middle name in full thus: J. Templeton Tompkins. The countryman looked at the signature, read it slowly, glanced at the fashionable merchant, who was very fascinatingly twirling his whiskers, and handing the bill over to him, remarked: "Here, stranger, cash that document." "What?" indignantly replied the merchant, "discount my own paper!—it is a positive insult."

"Wall, can't help it," said the countryman, "if you don't, I must get somebody else to do it." "To prevent his paper from getting on 'Change the merchant concluded to cash the bill, and paying over the money to the countryman, asked him quietly, "Why, my friend, do you offer me the gratuitous insult of requiring me to discount my own paper?" "I don't mean any harm, stranger, but I have just got this idea in my skull, that when you see a merchant with that har on his upper lip, who writes his middle name in full, and endorses bills with a gold pen, you may sit it down as perceiving he's going to bust up in a week.—New Orleans Delta.

God has written upon the flowers that sweeten the air—on the breeze that rocks the flowers on the stem—upon the rain drop that refreshes the sprig of moss that lifts its head in the desert—upon the ocean that rocks every swimmer in its deep chamber—upon every pencilled shell that sleeps in the caverns of the deep, no less than upon the mighty sun that warms and cheers millions of creatures that live in its light—upon his works he has written, "None of us liveth to himself." And probably were we wise enough to understand these works we should find there is nothing, from the cold stone in the earth, or the minutest creature that breathes—which may not, in some way or other, minister to the happiness of some living creature. We admire and praise the flower that best answers the end for which it was created, and the tree that bears fruit the most rich and abundant; the star that is most useful in the heavens we admire the most.

And is it not reasonable that man, to whom the whole creation, from the flower up to the spangled heavens all minister—man who has power of conferring deeper misery and higher happiness than any being on earth—man, who can act like God if he will: is it not reasonable that he should live for the noble end of living—not for himself, but for others.

WOMAN.—A gallant cotemporary thinks that this world would hardly be worth living in, were it deprived of woman. Listen to his rhapsody:—Who would remain in a garden from which the flowers have been taken, or in a grove from which the birds have departed, or beneath a sky that the sweet stars had forsaken? Let cynics prattle as they may, our existence here without the presence of the other sex would be only a dark and cheerless void. The light, the smiles and affections of woman are the bow of beauty and promise, which spans the life of man from his cradle to his grave.

A COINCIDENCE. It is a remarkable fact, that the three candidates now before the people of Ohio for President, and Vice President and Governor, have each commanded Ohio volunteers, while battling in defence of their country.

Gen. Cass during the war of 1812, raised and commanded one of the three regiments from Ohio, and opened the war by the affair of Canards, in Canada, where the blow was first struck during the war of 1812.

At Monterey, the first Ohio regiment was attached to General Butler's Division, and was commanded by him in person, until he fell, severely wounded, when the chief command of the division devolved on Gen. Hamer. In the same battle, Colonel Mitchell, of the Ohio regiment, was also severely wounded, and Lt. Col. John B. Weller took the command.

With the names of Cass, Butler & Weller, the fame of Ohio is closely associated. They led off gallant volunteers in defence of the country's rights and honor, and Ohio will sustain them at the next election, as the Ohio volunteers sustained them in the hour of peril.—Ohio Statesman.

A GRAY OF TRUTH.—Those who will learn and faithfully practice the doctrine taught in the following four lines, will have as much of the philosophy of human happiness, as can be found in many a ponderous library: "We may look for happiness in the world, but not in the things of the world. We shall find it, if anywhere, within ourselves—in our hearts and temples."
