SERMON BY REV. J. MONTGOMERY.

Whoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.—Romans 13: 2.

The ancient Hebrews, like the haughty cavaliers of the South, were an unsteady and seditious people. Their noted insubordination to heathen governments arose from their vanity, and their vanity arose from their fancied superiority. As the Hebrew Constitution was from God, it became a maxim with them that the whole world was theirs, and that they should have supreme control in all the earth.

Three years have passed, years fraught, as it seems to us at a distance, with great trials to the South, with loss and heavy sorrow, as we know to the North. How stand the three parties now? The Union is still upborne, less firmly than at first; and the area on which its hateful shadow falls is two-thirds less than in the beginning. Still it flies its signal word—"division."

Who stands the neutral party? Well, sir, our flag, I believe, is still floating, held more firmly than in the beginning, sustained by the courage and patriotism of the American people—and that is not the word I want to express my particular shade of meaning; it is upheld, I believe, by a stronger sentiment than courage or patriotism—the sense of duty and stern conscience of the American people.

Whoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God. The good of society is the fundamental reason on which all governments are based. It is therefore a matter that cannot be dispensed with at pleasure. God has ordained it, and the constitution of the universe demands it.

SPEECH OF HON. G. W. SCOFIELD.

One of the most pointed and pungent speeches delivered in the present Congress, was made by Hon. Glenn W. Scofield, of Warren, during a recent debate in the Committee of the whole. We subjoin the concluding portion of it:

Delivered in the Methodist Episcopal Church, in Little Cove, February 6, 1864.

A MORMOR priest, named Nicholas, made a nerve and bone all-healing salve, and thought he would experiment a little with it. He first cut off his dog's tail and applied some of the salve to the stump. A new tail grew out immediately. He then applied some to the piece of tail which he cut off, and a new dog grew out. He did not know which dog was which.
