A GRICULURAL CHEMICAL CO.'S CHEAP FERTILIZERS.

. —— 3 The Fertilizers prepared by the Agricultural Chemica Co., (a Company chartered by the Legislature of Pennsylvanin with a capital of $250,000.) have been proved in practice to be the cheapest, most profitable and best, for the Farmer, Gardener and Fruit-grower, of all concentra ted manures now offered in any market. The Company' list embraces the following:

PABULĖTTE.

This Fertilizer is composed of night soil and the fertilizing elements of urine, combined chemically and mechanically with other valuable fertilizing agents and absorbents It is reduced to a pulverulent condition; ready for im mediate use, and without loss of its highly nitrogenous ferilizing properties.

Its universal applicability to all crops and soils, and its durability and active qualities, are well known to be all that agriculturists can desire. Price $30 per Ton.

CHEMICAL COMPOST.

This Fertilizer is largely composed of animal matter, such as meat, bone, fish, leather, hair and wo di togethe with chemicals and inorganic fertilizers, which decompose the mass, and retain the pitrogenous elements. It is a very valuable fertilizer for field crops generally, and especially for potatoes, and garden purposes. 📜 Its excellent qualifies, strength and cheapness, have nade it very popular with all who have used it.

COMPOSITE FERTILIZER.

This highly phosphatic fertilizer is particularly adapted for the cultivation of trees, fruits, lawns and flowers. It will promote a very vigorous and healthy growth of wood and fruit, and largely increase the quantity and perfec the maturity of the fruit. For hot-house and household plants and flowers, it will be found an indispensable arti cle to secure their greatest perfection. It will prevent and pure diseased conditions of the peach and grape, and is excellent for grass and lawns.

It is composed of such elements as make it adapted to the growth of all kinds of crops in all kinds of soils. The formula or method of combining its constituent ferfilizing ingredients have received the highest approval of minent chemists and scientific agriculturists, Price $50 per Ton.

PHOSPHATE OF LIME.

The Agricultural Chenical Company manufacture a Phosphate of Lime in accordance with a new and valuable formula by which a very superior article is produced, so is to be afforded at a less price than other manufacturer charge. Practical tests have proved that its value, as a ertilizer, is equal to the best Phosphate of Live in the Price 865 per Ton.

WISHING.

Of all amusements for the mind. From logic down to fishing, There is nt one that you can find So very cheap as "wishing." A very choice diversion, too,

And not, as we are apt to do, Pervert it and abuse it. I wish-a common wish, indeed-

If we but rightly use it.

My purse was something fatter : That I might cheer the child of need And not my pride to flatter; That I might make oppression reel As only gold can make it, And break the tyrant's rod of steel

As only gold can break it. 1 wish-that sympathy and love, And every human passion

That has its origin above, That scorn, and lealousy, and hate, And every base emetion, Were buried fifty fathoms deep,

Beneath the waves of ocean i I wish-that friends were always true. And motives always pure; I wish the good were not so few

I wish that parsons ne'er forgot I wish that practicing was not So different from preaching-

I wish-that modest worth might be Appraised with truth and candor; I wish that innocence were free From treachery and slander;

I wish that men their vows would mind, That women ne'er were rovers;

I wish that wives were always kind, And husbands always lovers. I wish-in fine-that joy and mirth, And every good ideal,

May come, erewhile, throughout the earth. To be the glorious real; Till God shall every creature bless With His supremest blessing, And hope be lost in happiness, And wishing in possessing.

THE REWARD OF MERIT.

Annie had arrived at the mature age of (do no Anne had arrived at the mature age of (do not start, reader.) twenty-seven, and yet in a state of single blessedness. Somehow or other she had not even fallen in love yet. "Had she no offer?" What sample question! Did you ever know half a million of dollars to go begging? Offers? Yes, scores of them! It may be accounted as one of her oddities, perphaps, but whenever the subject happened to be touched upon by her father, Annie would say that she wanted some one who could love her for herself, and she must have assurance of this, and how should she in her present mediting? They matters stead when Annie ent position? Thus matters stood, when Anni ent position? I nuts matteristicod, when Annie was led to form and execute what will appear a very strange resolution—but she was a resolute girl. We must now go back six years.

One dark, rainy morning in November, as our old form and the stranger of th friend was looking composedly at the cheerful fire in the grete in his counting-room, really indulging in some serious reflections on the past and future, the far future, too, a gentleman presented himself and inquired for Mr. Bremen. The old man ut-tered not a word, but merely bowed. There was that in his looks which said "I am he."

The stranger might have been some thirty year or so of age. He was dressed in black, a mourn ing weed was on his hat, and there was some thing in his appearance which seemed to indicate that the friend whose loss he deplored had recently departed. The letter of introduction which he presented to Mr. B. was quickly yet carefully perused, and as it was somewhat unique, we shall take the liberty of submitting it to the inspection of the reader.

"Friend Paul:—This will introduce to thee, friend Charles Copeland. He has come to thy city in pursuit of business. I have known him from a youth up. Thou mayest depend upon him for aught that he can do, and shall not lean as upon a broken reed. If thou caust do anything for him thou mayost peradventure benefit thyself and find cause to rejoice.

"Thy former and present friend. "It is not every one that can get old Michs Loomis' endorsement on his character," said Paul Bremen, to himself, as he folded up the let ter of the well-known associate of former days.

"Old Micha is good for a quarter of a million, of or anything else—it will do—I want him—get ing old. business increasing—must have some more help—now as well as any time"

The old gentleman looked at all this,

'When can you begin?" A real smile shone on the old man's face. It lingered there like the rays of the setting su smoog the clouds of evening, lighting up those eemingly hard, dark features. A stool was pushed to the new comer, books were opened, matters explained, directions given, the pen was dipped in the ink, and in snort, before an hour had passed away, you would have thought that the old man and young man had thought that the old man and young man had known each other for years.

In reference to our new friend, it will be spffi-cient to remark that he had been liberally educa-ted, as the phrase goes, and though he had enter-ed early into business, he had not neglected the cultivation of his mind and heart. He had for cultivation of his mind and heart. He had found time to cherish a general acquaintance with the most noteworthy authors of the day, both literary and religious, and with meny of past times. After, a few years of success in the pursuits to which he had devoted himself, misforune came thick and fast upon him. He found himself left with scarcely any property, and alone in the world, save his two only daughters.

As year after year passed away, he grew steadily in the confidence of his employer, who felt, though he said if not, that in him he possessed a Very little indeed was said by either of them, not connected with the routine of business, and there had been no intercourse whatever between there had been no intercourse whatever between them, save in the counting-room. Thus six years went by, towards the close of which period old Mr Brennen was found looking with much frequency and earnestness at the young woman betore him; something was evidently brewing in the old head. What could it be? And then, too, he looked so curiously. The Irish servant was puzzled. "Sure." said James, "something's coming." Annie, too, was somewhat perplexed, tor these looks dwelt much on her.

"What is it, father?" she said to him one morn-

"What is it, father ?" she said to him one morning at the breakfast table, as he sat gazing stead-fastly in her face; "do tell me."

"I wish you'd have him?" burst forth like an avalanche. "Known him for six years—true as a ledgor—a gentlemen—real sensible man—don't talk much—regular as clock work—prime for business—worth his weight in gold." "Have who, father?" What are you talking "My head clerk, Copeland—you don't know im—I do—haven't seen anybody else worth a

Annie was puzzled. She laughed, however, and said—
"Marry my father's clerk! what would people say?"

"Humbug, child—all humbug—worth forty of your whiskered, lounging, lazy gentry; say what they please; what do I care? what do you care? what is money after all? got enough of it—want a sensible man—want somebody to take care of all humbug."
"What's all humbug, father?"

"Whit's an numbug, tainer".

"Why people's notions on these matters—

"Serious, child!" and he looked so.

Annie was a chip of the old block; a strong-ninded, resolute stri. A new idea seemed to trike her.

have him. But he shall love me for myself alone;

"Go ahead, my child, and do as you like. Good morning."
"Stop a moment, father. I shall alter my name a little; I shall appear to be a poor girl, a companion of our friend, Mrs. Richards, in H—street. She shall know the whole affair; you shall call me by my middle name, Peyton; I shall be a relative of yours; she shall suggest the business to Mr. Copeland, as you call him, and arrange for the first interview. The rest will take earn of it. first interview. The rest will take care of itself."

"I see, I see, and one of those rare smiles illuminated his whole face. It actually got between his lips, parted them asunder, ganced upon a set of teeth, but little the worse for wear, and was resting there, when he left the house for his counting-room. The twilight of that smile had not yet gone when he reached the well-known spot, and bowed, and looked "good morning" to those in his employ, for old Paul was, after his fashion, a politic man. On the morning of that day what holds. employ, for old Paul was, after his fashion, a po-lite man. On the morning of that day-what looks were directed to our old friend Charles, so many; so peculiar, so full of something, that the head clerk could not but notice them, and that too, with some alarm. What was coming? At length the volcano burst forth. "Copeland, my good fellow, why don't you get a wife?"

Had a thunderbott fallen at his feet he could not have been more astonned. Did Mr. Bremen say that, and in the counting room, too? The very ledger seemed to blush at the introduction of such a subject. He, for the first time, made a blot on the fair page before him.

"I say—why don't you get a wife?—know just the thing for you—prime article—poor caugh to be sure—what of that—a fortune in a wife, you know—a sort of a relation of mine—don't want to meddle with other people's affairs, know your own business best—can't help thinking you'll be happier—must see her."

happier—must see her."

Now the fact is, that Charles had for some time now the fact is, that Charles had for some time past thought so himself; but how the old man should have divined his feelings was quite a puzzle to him. In the course of the day a note was put into Mr. Bremen's hands by James, his Irish servant, the contents of which produced another grim smile. When the moment for his return home arrived, Mr. B. handed a sealed document of ratter than the charles against affects. ther imposing form to Charles, saying: "Copo-land, you'll oblige me by leaving that at No. 57 H — street. Place it in the hands of the person to whom it is directed; don't want to trust it to any one else."

The clerk saw on the outside, Mrs. Richards, No. 67, H—street. The door bell was rung. The servant ushered Copeland into a small, neat

The servant ushered Copeland into a small, next parlor, where sat a lady apparently twenty-five or thirty years of age, plainly dressed, engaged in knitting a stocking. Our friend bowed, and inquired for Mrs. Richards.

"She is not in, but is expected presently; will you be seated?" There was an ease and quietness, and an air of self command about this person which seemed peculiar to Copeland. He felt at ease at once, (you always do with such people) made some common-place remark which was immediately responded to; then another; and soon the conversation grew so interesting that Mrs. the conversation grew so interesting that Mrs. Richards was nearly forgotten. Her absence was strangely protracted, but at length she made her strangely protracted, but at length she made her appearance. The document was presented; a glance at the outside.

"Mr. Copeland?" Charles bowed.

"Miss Peyton" The young lady bowed, and thus they were introduced. There was no particular reason for remaining any longer, and our friend took his departure.

That night Annie said to Mr. B., "I like his appearance forther."

looked at his daughter with vast satisfaction.
"The ould man's as swate to night as a new pertatee," said James to the cook. The next day Charles Copeland came very near writing several times, "Miss Peyton, Dr." as he was making out some bills of merchandise sold.

Forward; march!" said old Paul, and he

"Delivered the paper last evening?"
Copeland bowed.
"Mrs. Richards is an old friend—humble in cir cumstances—the young lady, Peyton—worth her weight in gold any day—have her myself if I

"How much you remind me of Mr. B.," said Charles one evening to Annie; "I think you said you were a relation of his?"

"I am a relative of his through my mother," was the grave reply.

Mrs. Richards turned away to conceal a smile. Somewhat later than usual on that day Annio reached her father's house. There was no mistaking the expression of her countenance. Happiness was written there.

"I see, I see," said the old man; "the account is closed, books balanced, have it all through now in short time. You are a sensible girl—no foolish puss—just what I want—bless you, child, bless you?"

The next day Paul came, for almost the first time in his life, rather late to his counting room. Casks and boxes seemed to be starting with wonder.
"Copelaud you are a fine fellow—heard from Mrs. Richards—proposal to my relation, Peyton—all right—done up well. Come to my house this evening—never been there yet before, ehr—eight o'clock precisely—want to see you—got ight o clock precess, omething to say.

"How much interest he seems to take in this matter," said Charles. "He's a kind old fellow in his way; a little rough, but good at heart."
Yes Mr. Copeland, even kinder than you think for.

At eight o'clock precisely the door bell of Mr.

Bremen's mansion rung Mr. Charles Copeland was ushered in by friend James. Old Pant took him kindly by the hand, and turning round abruptly, introduced him to "My danghter, Miss Annie Peyton Bremen," and immediately withdrew.
"Charles will you forgive me this?" He was too much astonished to make any reply. "If you too much astonished to make any reply. "It you only knew all my feelings and motives, I am sure you would."

That the motives and feelings were soon explained to his entire satisfaction, no one will doubt. "Copeland, my dear fellow," shouted old Paul, as he entered the room, "no use of a long engage-

"Oh' father !"

"No use, I say; married now—get ready after-wards, next Monday evening, who cares? Want it over, feel settled. Shan't part with 'Ainne,' though—must bring your wife here—no words—partuer in business.—Bremen & Copeland—papers all drawn up—can't alter it—be quiet, will you?—won't stay in the room."

I have now finished my story, reader. I have given you the facts. I cannot say, however, that I approve of the deception practiced upon our friend Charles. As, however, our Lord commended the "unjust steward because he acted wisely," so I suppose the good sense shown by the ly," so I suppose the good sense shown by the young lady in choosing a husband for the sake of what he was, and not for the sake of what he might have possessed, merits our approbation.
It is not every one who has moral courage enough to step out of the circles which surround the wealthy, and seek for those qualities of mind which wealth neither gives nor takes away.

A curious care has transpired at Cleveland. A CURIOUS care has transpired at Cleveland. On Saturday, two young ladies applid for transportation to Washington, justifying their application by a statement that they had served two years n the army, and were discharged on the discovery of their sex. The appearance of one of them excited the suspicion of the ladies of the Sanitary society, respecting sex, and a committee withdrew with "Miss Charlotte" to another department, whence a supportused scream led a transfer ment, whence a suppressed scream led a transfer of investigations to the Provost Marshal, and the of investigations to the Provost Maistral, and the subsequent appearance of the lady in proper mas-culine attire. Miss Charlotte's companion appear-ed astonished and bewildered at the transformsed astonished and bewildered at the transforma-tion, and protested that she met "her" in the city two weeks ago, and they had since boarded and lodged together, and finally adopted this plan of procuring free transportation to Washington. Au examination of their bagage resulted in elicit-ing three complete suits of apparel—one a civilian, one military, with lieutenants insignia, and the third feminine. It is suspected that they are Re-bel snies.

A SCOTCH minister was once busy cateching his young parishioners before the congregation, when he put the usual first question to a stout girl, whose father kept a public house.

" What's your na What's your name in No reply. The question being repeated the girl replied—

Annie was a chip of the old block; a strong-minded, resolute gtri. A new idea seemed to strike her.
