require the husbandman and bring plenty to your people. As the cry rings to their maddening piles amidst the appalling devastation war has wrought...

In sincerest sorrow I am compelled to advert to the singular position assumed on this question by those who claim to be the peculiar supporters of government and law—my own and those of my associates.

Mr. McCURE—There must be law to which any answer to the question is necessary. I have been constant in season and out of season to defend the doctrines and policy of the party with which the gentleman from Warren (Mr. Brown) and myself act.
