PREJUDICE AGAINST NEGROES.

An honest, intelligent conviction, no matter how different from what we ourselves entertain, should always command our respect. If we cannot concur in the belief of others, we should at least dissent in a respectful manner, admitting at the same time the possibility of the error being on our side.

It is best always to keep in mind the imperfection of human knowledge, and while tenacious of our opinions to preserve an unbiased judgment. It has often happened that an idea emerging from dark obscurity has exploded beneath the fortifications of error and blown them and their defenders out of existence.

These remarks have been suggested by the violent and unreasonable hatred toward the negro that is constantly finding expression in the democratic journals, and more especially by a communication which appeared in last week's issue of the Spirit.

This seems to have been the condition of the Democratic party for the last five years. On the breaking out of the rebellion the southern wing formally renounced all allegiance to the United States Government and took, as they thought, a final leave of us.

The President of the United States was denounced as a tyrant, and was ridiculed as a buffoon, an ignorant boor, and with a choice selection of all the terms that Billingsgate could supply.

of late years that article has become scarce with them, and where they once appealed to cupidity they are now compelled to appeal to ignorance and prejudice.

It is best always to keep in mind the imperfection of human knowledge, and while tenacious of our opinions to preserve an unbiased judgment.
