

3. Resolved, That inasmuch as the precious metals constitute the basis of currency, which is essential to the prosperity of any business, and if the balance of foreign trade be against us, our specie must be exported to pay that balance; the amount of tariff ought also to be so regulated as to produce such a balance as will not only pay the interest of our foreign debt, but ultimately to discharge the principal of it, without the exportation of our gold and silver. So long as these metals are sent out of our country, we can have no sound or stable currency; and our home industry will consequently be paralyzed. Agreed to.

4. Resolved, That the truth of this doctrine is powerfully demonstrated by the facts, that while the United States, starting ten years ago, with little or no debt, but with a decreasing tariff in ten years have contracted two hundred and fifty millions of dollars of foreign debt, by reason of the balance of trade, besides borrowed money and specie gone from us, and have brought on their own people general distress. Great Britain, already burdened with a national debt of five thousand millions of dollars, and with most numerous and vast sources of expenditure, in the same ten years has actually secured herself a balance of trade of nearly two thousand millions of dollars; and has hereby maintained her credit. Agreed to.

5. Resolved, That it is expedient to levy and collect duties upon such foreign goods as do not compete with the products of our own industry, and are necessary to our own comfort, or auxiliary to our own manufactures. Agreed to.

6. Resolved, That we are in favor of the protection of all branches of home industry to the fullest extent, and particularly the manufacture of iron, and the mining of coal, in all their relations, as not only of paramount importance in themselves, but as deeply involving the prosperity of very many other branches of domestic industry; and most materially affecting the value of our public improvements. Agreed to—Gen. GREEK voting in the negative.

7. Resolved, That in order to carry out the views of the friends of home industry, and to enable them to act with the understanding and effect which the magnitude of the object requires, a central committee be appointed to receive the reports of county committees and associations, to make such use of information thus obtained as may appear to them best calculated to effect this object; and to superintend the establishment and support of a periodical publication at Harrisburg, devoted to the support of home industry, skill, credit and capital. Agreed to.

8. Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed in each county of the State, who are earnestly requested to organize such county association as they may think most likely to aid the cause of American industry, to obtain the information desired, and to furnish the central committee with all such statistical and other facts as are likely to promote the object contemplated by this Convention. Agreed to.

9. Resolved, That memorials to Congress be circulated throughout the State; and that the county committees be requested to have them as numerous as possible, and immediately forwarded to Washington city. Agreed to.

The Chair after the adoption of the resolutions, announced the following:

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.
HENRY K. STRONG, Harrisburg.
CALVIN BLYTHE, Harrisburg.
JAMES M. PORTER, Easton.
EDWARD J. ETTING, Philadelphia.
GEO. N. ECKERT, Schuylkill county.

On motion, the following resolution was passed unanimously:

Resolved, That the people of Pennsylvania engaged in manufacturing, agricultural, mining, mechanical and internal commercial pursuits, be requested to assemble in Convention at Harrisburg, on the 21st WEDNESDAY, THE 13th DAY OF APRIL NEXT, for the purpose of taking measures to secure all necessary encouragement of domestic labor, enterprise and capital, and thus promote the welfare of all classes of society.

Captain Ross's Discoveries.
Extracts from Capt. Ross's despatches have been published in a Parliamentary paper. From the map which accompanies the paper, we gain a more distinct idea of his track than the previous articles copied from the Athenaeum afforded. South Victoria Land, which he discovered, extends in latitude from 70° south to 73°; how much farther is unknown; and in longitude its eastern coast lies between 163 and 171.

Its position is directly south from New Zealand, at the distance of 1500 geographical miles. The length of the part seen was fully 500 miles. It was girt with a border of ice many miles in breadth, which rendered it inaccessible. The passage southward was closed at latitude 78 by a barrier of ice 150 feet high, which was traced for 300 miles east from Victoria Land. Icebergs were encountered in numbers after they passed the parallel of 63, and pack ice at 66.

The lead rose in lofty peaks from 9000 to 12,000 feet in height, perfectly covered with eternal snow; the glaciers that descended from near the mountain summits projected many miles into the ocean, and presented a perpendicular face of lofty cliffs. They could not reach the main land, but landed on an island, which they found to consist of volcanic rocks. On 28th Jan., in lat. 77 1-2 Jan. 1842, they discovered a magnificent volcano, emitting smoke and flame in splendid profusion, and named it Mount Erebus.

An extinct one was named after the vessel, Mount Terror. At the distance of less than half a mile from the ice cliffs which barred their progress southward, they had soundings with three hundred and eighteen fathoms. These cliffs, no doubt, reached the bottom, and including the 150 above water, must have had an elevation of 2000 feet or thereabout. The observations on the dip and declination induced them to place the South Magnetic Pole in latitude 75, and East long, one hundred and fifty-three; and they considered its position as well ascertained as if they had reached it, though their nearest approach to it was a point 160 miles from it, on the east coast of Victoria Land. The pole is probably within that region, though this cannot be positively affirmed, as its western boundary is unknown. The highest latitude they reached was 78.4. They were therefore only 12 degrees from the pole, and about 4 degrees nearer to it than Captain Weddell, the most successful of their predecessors.—Scotsman.

EARLY RISING.—The late Chief Baron O'Grady, who, like the matutine planets, was generally up before the sun, was always in the same predicament with reference to his own son, Dennis, whose slumbers were often prolonged far into the morning. Once, when the Baron was on circuit, and knew that his son was engaged as barrister, in the first case, he hurried into his room, and, waking him without much ceremony, exclaimed, "Up with you, Dennis! remember it's the early bird that catches the worm." "Serves the worm right for being up still earlier than the bird," replied the sly sardar rubbing his eyes.

DOUBLE-HEADED.—A newspaper is published at Rockville, Ind., one page of which advocates whig doctrines, and another democratic. The paper is called the 'Olive Branch.' It has two editors, one whig and one democrat.

COUGH, CONSUMPTION, AND DIFFICULTY OF BREATHING CURED.—Mrs. Levy, a very highly respectable lady of Philadelphia, residing in Locust street, between Fourth and Fifth, had been laboring for upwards of six months under a very bad cough, attended with difficulty of breathing, pains in her breast and side, and a sickness at the stomach, having lost all appetite; she became so very much reduced in strength, as to be unable to work; she was considered in a consumptive state, and given up by the physicians that attended her. In this situation she had recourse to Brandt's Vegetable Universal Pills, and to her great astonishment, before she had taken one box, (25 pills) found herself very much relieved; she expectorated a great quantity of phlegm, which has eased her of one of the most violent coughs that ever was experienced by mortal man. She has taken the Pills regularly ever since, and now finds herself completely recovered, and will certainly for the benefit received, recommend them as far as she can, believing them to be a most effectual medicine in the above complaint.
