

From the New Orleans Piousness.

The following scene was described to me by an officer commanding a regiment in the 31st division at the battles of Monterey. I give it almost in his own language, as he spoke of it the day after it occurred (24th September). He has declared often since, that it made him feel sentimental every time he thought of it, and I am sure I never thought of accusing him of weakness, for it gave me the blues to hear him tell the story.

And this, said he, in speaking of home reminds me of an affecting scene of last night. I was ordered by Col. Childs to take a company of my regiment and break in the doors of a row of houses in the second plaza. I had gone nearly through without seeing a soul, when, for a time, the efforts of my men were exerted in vain to get into one that seemed barricaded with care.

As the hinges of the door were about to give way, a tremulous voice on the inside beseeched me not to break the door down, as well as I could, over beds, chairs, cushions, etc., etc., and to my surprise found the room occupied by about twenty five women; As soon as they saw me and the soldiers following, they ran around me and fell on their knees, the older beseeching, in tones of deep distress, my protection, and to have their lives spared; the younger begging timidly not to be injured.

While they were thus kneeling, and I assuring them that no harm or injury should befall them, a pretty little woman slid into the circle and knelt close to my feet. 'Senior,' said she, in a soft, quivering voice, 'for the love you bore your mother, for the love you have for your wife, for the tender affliction your heart holds for your children, oh, spare this, my poor little babe'—holding up a bright eyed, dimpled checked little boy, about a year old. She never asked for herself. In spite of me, tears rushed to my eyes, and I could only speak with a full heart as I told her to rise, and assured her that she and her child were perfectly safe.

'Be the Holy Virgin Caring,' remarked a rough Irish soldier, wiping away a tear with the back of his hand, 'won't the cold Seventh partect them?'

'That night I watched over that room, which was sacredly kept from intrusion. The next day we were blessed by these females in their attitudes, for the protection we had given them, for they gave us of what they had to eat and drink, and we were nearly famished. Poor creatures, how much they were distressed. The young mother will ever be painted in my mind's eye as the devoted guardian of her babe.

Her husband, I learned, was an officer, and was then fighting us in the city. She could not have known whether he was alive or not, and I have not heard of him.

Many scenes, very like that described above, took place in the city. I did not hear of a single outrage being committed where women were in the question, but heard of many instances in which food was furnished to our men and paid for, even when the fight was going on.

TO DRIVE RATS FROM YOUR PREMISES.—Buy one pound of chloride of lime, and scatter it dry into every rat hole and place that they visit, in the cellar and other parts of the house, in sand under the cellar-wall, and they will soon leave you. Don't put it on or very near any article of family provision.

THE SCOTSMAN'S CALL.—A young clergyman in Scotland, being about to leave the scene of his orthodox labor for another settlement, called on an old lady belonging to his congregation, to say farewell, and to thank her for the kindness he had experienced from her.

And as she yearn to leave us, said the old lady, well, I wish ye God's blessing; ye've been a sober, staid, discreet young man; and I doubt not ye'll have your reward. And where are ye about to settle?
