

From the Knickerbocker. Lines Written Twenty Years After Writing.

Dear wife, some twenty years have flown Since you and I agreed to marry; That you were rather young I own, But when I was too old to marry; In single state full long enough I'd lived and wished to try the double; Friendship I'd found but meagre stuff, And Fame an evanescent bubble. From books no more a solace came, To soothe me in my lonesome times, And writing prose seems very tame, And still more stupid stringing rhymes, The drama I pronounced a bore, I cared not for a mimic passion, Or plots and characters of yore, When solemn nonsense was in fashion. There was a vacuum in my heart A sort of strange and constant longing; And thro' my brain what thoughts would dart, How many shapes go wildly thronging; My feeling that were like a feather, Became so heavy, sad, peculiar; At first I guessed it was the weather, And then my ancient sweetheart, Julia. But when the former grew quite warm, And quite as warmly smiled the latter, I found that neither sun nor storm Nor gentle Julia was the matter; "Who is then?" I wondrously cried, It must be some such charming fairy; A lovelier one my soul replied, "Delicious, dear enchanting Mary." At first you doubted, then refused To listen to my sudden wooing, But when you paused and wily mused, Upon your charms and my undoing, Your tender breast relenting knew Something of Love's sublime emotion, And finally repaid the true Deep fervor of my soul's devotion. Sweet wife! did I not tell you sooth That we should always love each other, That I would always be in truth Your more than husband father, brother? Ah! what have you not been to me! My hope, my joy, my pride, my treasure, Since twenty years have flown with thee, Like dreams of pure untruffled pleasure.

HOW A FARMER OUT WEST PRESERVES HIS EGGS.—A gallon pot is filled with eggs; and one pint of lime, of the consistency of common white wash, poured in, and the pot filled with water. A board is then placed on the top, and the water, which is never changed, as well as the eggs, remain pure and sweet. This practice is the one most common in France, the inhabitants of which, to their love of frogs and soup, add also, it appears, a very commendable taste for eggs.

MODESTY.—Dr. Charles Caldwell, of Louisville, Ky., lecturing on Phrenology once at Cincinnati, perpetrated the following: "The three best heads, phrenologically considered, in the United States, are first, that of Hon. Daniel Webster, second, that of Hon. Henry Clay, and the third and best of the three"—added he, brushing up his hair with his hand—"modesty forbids me to mention."—Cist's Advertiser.

HIGHER.—A noble motto for a young man—higher. Never look down. Aim high; push high; leap high. If you cannot reach the stars, you can have the satisfaction of drawing near to them. He who stands on an elevated position, is sure to catch the first rays of the glorious sun. So he who is always stepping up and reaching up, will first catch the favors and blessings of Heaven as they descend.—There is no object on which we gaze that gives us so much pleasure as the upward and continued progress in moral culture and robust virtue of enterprising young men. When the chains of sloth are broken, the vision is clear, the heart buoyant, and the affections and purposes strong, higher and still higher objects will be gazed—nobler purposes be achieved, and a sublime elevation attained, that will thrill with joy future generations as they march on in the same glorious path.—Portland Bulletin.

A clergyman in Scotland desired his hearers never to call one another liars, but when one said a thing that was not true, they ought to whistle. One Sunday he preached a sermon on the parable of the leaves and fishes; and being at loss how to explain it, he said the leaves were not like those now-a-days, they were as big as the hills in Scotland. He scarcely pronounced the words when he heard a loud whistle. "What's that," said he—"who calls me a liar!" "It is I, Wally McDonald, the baker." "Well, Wally, what objections ha' ye to what I told you?" "None, Master John, only I wanted to know what sort of ovens they had to bake those loaves in!"

Some years ago the following epiphany was inscribed on the grave of an elderly spinster in Aldgate church yard:— She was—but words are wanting to say what— Think what woman should be, and she was that. A day or two afterwards the following additional production of some wretched wag, was found cut on the stone:— A woman should be both a wife and mother, But Sarah Jones was neither one nor t'other.
