Horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry-all are grateful for a few nubbins of corn, and the armer must have a pretty generous harvest to have any left in his crib, to sell in the spring. He disposes of most of his corn in the form of beef, mutton, wool, butter, pork, and poultry, and has a considerable portion left to return to his land in manure. The average yield of corn in the Genesee country is altogether too small.

We do not make our hand rich enoughdo not till it well enough-do not cultivate the corn enough, to produce maximum crops. We now and then hear of a farmer raising 80 to 100 bushels of shelled corn to an acre. just to show us what can be done, but most of us are content to raise from 30 to 50 bushels. We, somehow, act as if we think it to go over twenty acres of land to get 800 From INSLEY JEWETT, No.15 Avon Place, Boston shels of corn than to raise the same quantity on eight or ten acres.

They have one practice at the east that we night profitably adopt here—that is, manur-ing in the hill with some quick acting fertilizer. They use poudrette there. In the absence of that, we might use hen manure. composted with gypsum, muck, or mould. poonful of such a compost dropped on the corn before covering, would give it a nderful start, and greatly augment the

The varieties mostly cultivated here, are the eight-rowed, white, the eight-rowed yellow, and the red-blazed, also eight-rowed. The latter, on good land, is generally the most productive. The King Phillip improv-ed, and the Ohio dent are occasionally grown. We generally plant all but the latter, about D<sub>r</sub>, H. Anders' lodine Water most productive. The King Phillipimprovthree feet apart each way. The dent should be at least four feet. We generally plant from five to eight grains in a hill. Three stalks are enough to grow, but we have to allow about half for casualities.

Our time of planting is from the tenth to the fifteenth of May according to the season. We favor early planting .- American Farmer

BEES AND HONEY.

James Bruce, in The Scottish Farmer, thinks the agricultural population cannot be too strongly impressed with the expediency of keeping bees. VARIETTES OF FLOUR. -- I have grown the "Hoosac" or China Tea Wheat for the last five years. Until last year, it gave good yield, say eighteen bushels per acre. This wheat should be cut as soon as ripe, or a little before ; otherwise it shells badly. I think the Yellow Fife is as good for flour, better to ield, and it will not suffer as badly by standing after it is ripe. I raised it last year; the best gave from 20 to 25 bushels per acre ; season for wheat with us. The Yellow Fife Rev.
