

W. H. JACOBY & E. E. IKELER, EDITORS. BLOOMSBURG, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 29, 1866.

FOR GOVERNOR, HON. HIESTER CYLMEK, OF BERKS COUNTY. FOR CONGRESS, HON. WILLIAM ELWELL, (Subject to the decision of the Congressional Con. Com.) FOR STATE SENATOR, HON. LEVI L. TATE, (Subject to the decision of the Senatorial Conference.) FOR ASSEMBLY, THOMAS CHALFANT. FOR ASSOCIATE JUDGES, PETER K. HERBEIN, IRAM DERR. FOR PROTHONOTARY, JESSE COLEMAN. FOR REGISTER AND RECORDER, JOHN G. FREEZE. FOR COMMISSIONER, MONTGOMERY COLE. FOR AUDITOR, JOHN HANNAN.

The Ticket. We run to our mast head to-day, the ticket placed in nomination, by the county convention on Monday last. That it will give general satisfaction, to the Democracy and the people of the county every body believes. Since we have taken part in politics we have never known a convention to pass off as harmoniously as did the one that placed in nomination the ticket we present to-day, nor have we ever seen unucky candidates for the different positions, more determined to do all in their power to secure an overwhelming majority, for their successful competitors. To say that the ticket is the best that could be formed, would be casting a slur upon the many good men whose names were used in the convention; but were not chosen as candidates; but when we say that on the whole, a better or if stronger ticket could not have been made, we are not saying a word too much. Every man upon it is capable, honest, strait forward and deserving—faithful democrats and honest, honorable citizens. They cannot fail to fill the different positions for which they have been chosen, with credit to themselves, their country and the party that supports them.

We do not intend, as has heretofore been customary, to enter into the special laudation of each candidate. What can be said of one can be said of all, and the peculiar fitness of each one for the position to which he has been chosen, is admitted, by every one, even by the bitterest enemies our party has. Not only as candidates, are they qualified to fill the various offices for which they have been selected, but as citizens, they are without a stain upon their characters, or a blot upon their political records as Democrats.

To them, we point with pride as the standard bearers of our grand old party, in the campaign which has now opened. They are the representatives of a party whose aim is to advance the interest of the white man, whose care is to protect the rights of the white man, and whose great object is to preserve this, a government of white men. Around them will rally every voter in the county who believes he was born superior to the ignorant and degraded African—around them will rally every voter who favors low taxes, economy in public expenditures, honest officials, and competent men to fill public places.

And now that the Democracy have a ticket in the field—a ticket that is in every respect worthy their confidence and support—let them go to work. They must not rely upon the popularity of individual candidates, nor be satisfied with half an effort, because our opponents are weak, or the certainty of success beyond a doubt. We have more to do in this county than simply elect our county ticket, we have to aid in the election of an honest Governor, and a Congressman who will do something for white men, whose interests are at stake, and whose time will not all be spent in legislating for niggers, contractors, and public plunder. If the Democracy of this county but do their duty we honestly believe they can roll up a majority of eighteen hundred for HIESTER CYLMEK, the white man's candidate, and for the whole ticket from Congress down. Shall it be done? Or shall we be content with the meager majority of fourteen hundred? It is for you, Democrats, to say. Never was there such an opportunity for striking a death-blow to abolitionism in this section of the State. Never were the prospects as bright for an overwhelming victory. Shall we have it to rejoice over? Work and work only will secure it.

Montour County. The Democracy of Montour County met in Convention on the 20th inst. and put in nomination the following ticket: Senator—William A. Dean. Assembly—Thomas Chalfant. Associate Judges—Peter Hughes, James Curry. Prothonotary—William O. Butler. Commissioner—James Shultz. Treasurer—Jacob Seidel. Auditors—William Blou, 1 year; J. Winterston, 2 years. JOHN W. MILLS and JESSE C. AMMERMAN, Esqrs., were appointed Congressional Conference, uninstrued.

Hons. Samuel Oakes and Robert Moore were appointed Senatorial Conference with instructions to support William A. Dean for Senator. John McWilliams and Joseph H. Campbell, Esq., were appointed Representative Conference, with instructions to support Capt. Thomas Chalfant for Assembly. B. K. KROGER, Esq., was appointed Chairman of the Democratic County Committee for the ensuing year. The Democracy of this county have a good ticket. Let every man work earnestly to elect it.

Hon. William Elwell. This distinguished individual needs no eulogy from us, but as we are now expected to advocate the claims of the people of this county for men whom they desire shall represent them in the councils of the nation, the HON. WILLIAM ELWELL highly deserves a place in the group. That he is the unanimous choice of the people of this Congressional District for Congress, there is no longer a shadow of a doubt. And it is equally evident that he is the most worthy, popular, and influential man in the District, and will accept the nomination. He is distinguished for his legal acquirements and acumen, and for his broad and comprehensive mind as a judge, jurist and statesman. Unfortunately for this Republic, selfish ambition has had too much to do with the selection of men to fill positions which require statesmen; and too often there is not sufficient regard for that truthfulness and consideration for the welfare of others, which should animate the servants of the State. That these elements of character are combined, in the subject of our notice, is a fixed fact with all who know him. Not a mere pettifogger, who quibbles and quarrels, but with his broad and comprehensive intellect he is enabled, with a moment's notice, to grasp public questions, and to suggest such measures as may be necessary for the improvement of the people and the development of the country. Therefore, we say, that in the person of the HON. WILLIAM ELWELL, we have all the requirements necessary to draw, hastily and correctly, nice distinctions, to come to correct conclusions, and to see that justice is done by nations and by individuals. We say, again, that he has the intellectual power to grasp, at a single glance of the mind, the truth in relation to a subject, to comprehend the interior essence of things, and, therefore, he will make the best statesman. With his unsurpassed popularity, and influence, wherever known, which is necessary to secure his, or any other man's election in this District, we say, let him be nominated without dispute.

We Stoop to Conquer. The Brigadier of the Columbia, who, from the first has been making personal assaults upon the junior editor of the DEMOCRAT AND STAR, has at last got mad and like a whipped school-boy, when a trifle of his coin is returned to him, came out in last week's Columbia, with nearly two columns of stuff, consisting of low criticisms, transparent falsehoods, personal abuse, baby et pleading and child-like calling of names, eminently characteristic of the sheet in its poverty of intellect and sense, but a species of journalism which the junior editor of the DEMOCRAT AND STAR does not propose to imitate. From the beginning, the Columbia, has maintained this sort of warfare and personal abuse upon the junior editor of this paper, with all the malignity and vigor the trifling ability connected with the concern could afford, and with a littleness seldom seen in any paper, it attempts to show its wit by fibbing and blubbering about a few typographical errors which unobserved appeared in our paper, and which could have been corrected a thousand times did we not give more original matter in our paper than the Columbia contains. With some regard for his feelings, and pity for his want of sense, we again admonish him that it requires a larger capital stock of brains, than he possesses to become a wit, and that the profession of blackguardism which he seems to have adopted is frequently attended with such cuffs and kicks as will not only set him howling but will prove his utter ruin. The denunciation of the DEMOCRAT AND STAR, and the junior editor, by the Columbia, are fully appreciated by us, by our readers, and by the public. That paper does not, and cannot argue a question or discuss a principle; and, it is therefore much easier and more in conformity with the intellectual capacity of that concern to denounce us and our paper, than to dispute its statements or refute its arguments; but we take no pleasure in exposing the Columbia's stupidity or replying to its silly squibs.

State Senator. On last Monday the Democratic Convention of this county, nominated the Hon. LEVI L. TATE, for State Senator, with a resolution, directing the Conferees to use all honorable means to secure his nomination, by the District Conference. It is certain that Col. TATE, was deserving this honor. Having served the Democratic Party earnestly, as an editor and public speaker, for a period of over thirty years, it was only a spontaneous tribute of the people to his honesty, capacity and fidelity. He is very favorably known, not only in the District, but throughout the State—served faithfully in our State Legislature, as a Democratic champion of liberty, when it was considered treason by our political opponents who were then in power, to be a Democrat—he is very popular among the people on account of his high social standing, and for having aided the Democracy largely with both pen and voice in every political contest since 1836. The Democracy of this District can do no greater credit to themselves than to confirm the nomination of Mr. TATE, and we feel sure that he will receive such a vote as his labors deserve.

EXEMPTIONS.—We see by our exchanges that the amended Revenue Law makes some important exemption. Although we have seen no official announcement of the fact, it is stated that all printed matter is exempt, such as papers, books, pamphlets, cards, charts, bill-heads and job printing of all kinds. Also that the tax of 40 cents per head imposed on beef cattle slaughtered by butchers and packers, has been removed, as well as the tax on repairs and all agricultural implements, including reapers, mowers, plows, harrows, cultivators, straw-cutters. STRAWS, &c.—A vote was taken on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, August 4th, by Captain H. O. Thayer, of Wayne County, which resulted as follows: Clymer..... 65 Geary..... 14 A number of well known Republicans on board the train voted for Clymer. The gallant Captain Thayer, a three year soldier, voted for Clymer. Straws show that the people are opposed to Geary and negro suffrage.

Conferees' Meeting. Convened at the Forks Hotel, in Bloomsburg, August 28th, 1866, at 1 o'clock, P. M. On motion, Mr. JOHN SNYDER, was declared President, and J. H. CAMPBELL, Esq., Secretary. The meeting adjourned for 15 minutes. Conferees met, pursuant to adjournment. On motion of Mr. Fruit, THOMAS CHALFANT, was duly nominated as candidate for Assembly, of the district composed of the counties of Montour and Columbia. On motion, adjourned, sine die. JOSEPH H. CAMPBELL, Sec'y.

Soldiers' National Convention. The call for a Soldiers' National Convention to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, appeared in most of our exchanges. It is to be composed of those who served in the Army and Navy of the United States during the war, and who support the Union policy of the President. The seventeenth of September is appropriately appointed as the day on which the Convention shall assemble, that being the anniversary of the adoption of the Federal Constitution. We have no doubt the Radicals would like to apply to those whose names are attached to this call the epithets which their unscrupulous malice has applied to all other true friends of the Constitution and the Union. But they will hardly venture to make themselves so ridiculous. The names attached to the call are such as must command at least the respect of the Radicals. The men who here speak for the supremacy of the Constitution and the restoration of the Union are no "pipe-clay soldiers" or "home guards." They are nearly all of them officers who won high distinction on the battle-field; and bigoted as radicalism is, there cannot be one of its advocates so blinded by passion as not to feel that if he should ascribe to the signers of this call the sentiments which have been designedly ascribed to other opponents by the Radical press, like Dogberry, he would "write himself down an ass." The large number of Generals and other officers of high rank who have united in this call have performed a duty to themselves as well as to their country. It was, as they doubtless felt, a duty they owe to their country to unite in the movement to restore the Constitution to its former supremacy, and they owed it to themselves to take the action they have in order to let the country understand that they have nothing in common with the malign spirit or disunion heresies which form the Radical creed. The call shows that they understand the object of the misrepresentation and clamor in which the enemies of restoration indulge, and are not to be diverted from their support of the restoration policy by the sophistries or calumnies of the Radical disunionists. The work goes bravely on, and the indications are that at the coming elections the men who have arrayed themselves against the Union and sought and still seek to destroy the Constitution will be hupled from power by the people.

In a congratulatory letter addressed to the Democratic State Central Committee of Kentucky, Mr. Vallandigham says: "Allow me to renew by mail the congratulations this day transmitted by telegraph upon the glorious victory achieved by the Democracy of Kentucky yesterday. It was the triumph of principle and courage. You did not fear to re-establish and maintain the Democratic party in all its integrity as an organ of the people, and to proclaim the old and sound Constitutional Union and State Rights faith of the fathers of that party. You were not afraid to invite to your aid men of the Democratic party at home, and from abroad, who were odious to tyrants and the apologists or minions of tyrants, only because they had first made tyrannical odious. Truly and overwhelmingly, therefore, the reaction begins to set in here. My faith of the fathers of that party. You were not afraid to invite to your aid men of the Democratic party at home, and from abroad, who were odious to tyrants and the apologists or minions of tyrants, only because they had first made tyrannical odious. Truly and overwhelmingly, therefore, the reaction begins to set in here. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote him out. It is impossible to conceive a more odious and damaging imputation upon Southern delegations than this. What! turn upon a man who had suffered imprisonment, persecution and exile for sympathizing with our sufferings and trials! If there was one wretch so odious to the South, I am happy to say I did not and nor will I ever do so. My own views and sense of duty were very clear, and I believe they were those of every Southern gentleman in the convention. It was that we could not, in personal honor or conscience of our constituents, vote to unseat a gentleman whose right to a seat was patent on the face of the Constitution of Ohio, was as good as his own, and who only withdrew that he would vote