Hot Beds-How Made.

Farmer, like other people, are fond of carly vegetables. But it is too generally the case, that they neglect to raise them. People in the city will have the earliest to be obtained and are willing to pay exorbitant prices for them.

Farmers could raise, even in the hot bed, the earliest vegetables, at very little cost -The hot bed requires attention early in the season, when there is but little other work on hand, and consequently could be attended to about as well as not. We propose to in form our readers how they are made. Selection of Ground.—The ground upon which a not bed should be made, should have a southerly or southeasterly inclination. It should be fully exposed to the sun andout of the shade of trees, building, &c. dry place is preferable-where water will not stand in pits one or two feet in depth, after a rain.

The Frame and Sash .- The frame or box which supports the sash is generally about four and a half or five feet wide, and may be made to any desired length. The frames are generally made so as to be covered with from three to five sashes, each sash being commonly about four inches wide, and four and a half or five feet long. The frame may be made of inch plank-the side exposed to the north being six or eight inches highes than the southerly side, so as to have proper slope to the sun.

The smallest sized glass should be used in he sash-certainly not larger than seven by nine. The smaller the size the better, as a small pane of glass is not so liable to be broas a large one, and can be more cheaply 1epaired. No cross bars are used in the sash -the panes over-lapping each other about a quarter of an inch, like the shinkles of a house, and resting on bars that run lengthwise, of each sash, just the right width for the panes to rest on two bars. The bars upon which the panes of glass rest should be an inch and a half or two inches wide.

Preparation of the Beds .- It is a good plan to dig a pit from one to two feet deep where the bed is to be made, although this is not always done. Over this pit must be placed the frame. Now fill in half full with some fresh horse stable manure which has not been exposed to the rains, and which, within the last two weeks, has been turned over two or three times. If the manure is rather dry, water should be sprinkled upon it. The sashes of glass may now be placed upon the bed frame and the bed left for about 12 hours, when air should be given it and it should be closed again. In three or four EXTRACT BUCHU days the soil may be put on this bed of m.-For all affections and diseases of these organs, whether and it should be spread to the depth of six or eight inches evenly over the bed. In one or two days the seed may be sown. If sown as soon as the soil is put on, the soil is said And to is certain to have the desired effect in all diseases to burn so as to destroy the germ of the seed. Therefore air should be given to the bed once or twice before the seed is sown. After the seed is sown the bed should be sprinkled with water from the watering pot daily till the plants appear. Air should be given daily when the weather will permit so as to make the plants strong and harday. The bed should be kept at the temperature of about sixty degrees. The outside of the frame should be banked up with manure so as to keep the bed warm. In cold freezing FLUID EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA weather the beds will need to be protected by being covered with mats or straw .- Valley Farmer. ..... SOWING OATS IN FEBRUARY .- A COTTESpondent of the American Farmer, living in Baltimore County, Maryland, reports having tried the experiment of sowing oats in February. He had prepared in the autumn of the worst disorders that afflict mankind arise from the of 1865 a small strip of tolerably rich elay s loam, having an easterly exposure, and on coust in cfloct litranoin's Comportan Extract of Capthe last snow in February he sowed it down the vicor of health into the system, and purges out the in oats. At the same time the land was top- bumers which make disease. It stimulates the healthdressed at the rate of twenty-two horse cart and maning the blood. Such a remedy that could be loads of barn-yard compost per acre. For relied on has long been sought for, and now, for the first the process of covering the seed and manure, he relied upon the honey-comb state of the but the trial of a single bottle will show to the sick that it land, aided by the melting snow and spring rains. The seed germs started vigorously to a plat of water is equal to the Lisbon Diet Drink, and and promised success, and when the plants one bottle to fully could to a gallon of the Syrup of Sarsawhere sufficiently grown and the land dry, he passed a common drag harrow over it, followed by the roller, He ploughed, manured and managed three acres in a simalar manner, and sowed the oats about the 10th of the following April. The oats sown in February produced a heavier crop, greater weight of grain and straw, and was ready for the scythe upwards of two weeks earlier than that sown in April. He says clover and other grass seeds may be sown in February, at the same time of seeding the oats. This is a striking and useful experiment Including emineat Physicians, Clergymen, Statesmen, &c. and should be fully tested. It is well known that there is a great advantage in the earli- articles rank as Standard Preparations, and do not need est possible sowing of this crop consistent to be propped up by certificates. with its safety, and which the preparation stand simple, pure, majestic, having Fact for its basis, of the ground will allow. If further trials Induction for its pillar, and Truth alone for its Capitalshall show similar results, a great improvement may be made on our common practice. It will greatly favor too the clover seed, if it can be sown thus early on land prepared in the fall. It way be too late with many farmers to try the experiment on fall-ploughed ground, but it would be a good idea to try it upon ground prepared during this month or early next. We hope some of our Tennessee farmers will give the experiment such a trial.
