FORTHEFARMER.

The Plow.

God speed the plowshare! tell me not Disgrace attends the toil

Of those who plow the dark-green sod, Or till the fruitful soil.

Why should the honest plowman shrink From mingling in the van Of learning and of wisdom, since

'Tis mind that makes the man.

The labors of the plow.

God speed the prowshare, and the hands That till the fruitful earth! For there is in this world so wide

No gem like honest worth. And though the hands are dark with toil, And flushed the manly brow, It matters not, for God will bless

SELECTION OF A FARM.

"What is a farm?" Consult "Webster's Unabridged;" that will tell us. [Reads.] "A portion or tract of land consisting usually of pasture, meadow, tillage, and woodland, cultivated by one man, and usually owned by him in fee."

A farm, then, is the home of the owner. Its management is the business of the

What more can a man desire? A home, pleasant and comfortable, a business healthful and remunerative; as much or more so than any other occupation or profession presents.

In order to be a farmer, one must first "get a farm." Let us talk, then, of some things to be considered in its selection.

1. The farm as a home should be pleasantly and conveniently situated. It is to be the homestead and abiding place of the owner. The health, comfort, and happiness of those who occupy it are of the first importance; so every social and physical influence which bear upon them should have due weight in determining a choice. Health should be considered as far above a fertile soil. Comfort will compensate for many pecuniary disadvantages. Happiness—the enjoyment of social privileges and advantages-go far to make a sterile soil of greater value than the most easily cultivated and productive, when a moral miasma prevails. A situation convenient to market, to railroad, or steamboat routes, and with educational and religious privileges of a high class, would be considered of much importance by the intelligent and cultivated man, who would make farming his business and the farm his home.

2. The farm, as a business, should be well chosen to make that business profitable. And yet, upon the management and carrying on of the farm depends, more than anything else, the success of the farmer. Let us give a few hints on some of the essentials to productive farming, to be thought of by every owner of the soil.

The farm should in extent be suited to the means and circumstances of the farmer. One cannot put all his capital in land, and expect to farm profitably upon credit and makeshifts-so cramped that all improvements seem out of his reach. It requires as much capital to stock a farm, generally, as to pay for the land itself.

The farm should be suited to the products to which it is intended to be devoted. The tastes and experience of the owner will incite him to undertake certain branches of farming; but some soils are best calculated for grain growing, others for fruit, others for the dairy or stock generally, while occasional locations are to be found where all these may be combined to a greater or lesser extent. These things should be considered in determining the selection.

The farm should be suited to the production of crops readily and profitably marketed, as far as may be. In the management of the farm, much depends on market facilities, and it is worth some consideration whether it will cost ten cents or one hundred cents to bring a product before the consumer. But the recent great increase in the means of transportation, has done much to equalize the value of farming lands throughout the country, especially when devoted to the more costly and least bulky articles of produce.

The farm should possess in itself, or its course of management should be such as to keep up within itself the power of producing valuable products. A farm easily worn out-a course of management rapidby exhausting the fertility of the soil, would soon bankrupt the farmer; his business would no longer be remunerative; his home and his comforts would soon pass away. To do business profitably, one must understand business principles, and earry them out, and nowhere is this more important than upon the farm.

VERY GOOD.-Every one knows what week, month or year. keeping a farm in order means? It does not mean merely to keep the soil in a fertile and growing condition, but it applies to everything on a farm; the buildings, the fences, the fruit trees, the farming implements, particularly the latter; for what man can do a good job with poor tools? And what is more, look at the labor. Every one knows that it takes nearly twice the amount of labor to plow a field with a poor plow than it does with a good one, and when it is plowed, it is not more than half done. If a man has poor tools they are all the time getting out of 413 Market street, (Truitt & Bro's old stand,) order, and the time lost in repairing and the labor lost in working will pay for good and substantial ones.

An Irishman was hired by a farmer to plow; finding he was making a poor hand at the business, the farmer asked: "Did you not tell me, sir, you could hold a plow?" "Arrah! be aisy now," said Pat; how the dence can I hold it, and two horses drawing it away from me?"

The Plowing Match will take place on the third day, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and the Ladies Riding Match the same day at 2 o'clock Exhibitors, will, in all cases, be required to become members of the Society, and those who do not previously communicate with the Secretary, will be waited on by the Reception Committee at the Fair Grounds. Everything intended for exhibition must be entered at the office, together with the name and residence of the owner, and will be marked and designated by a card numbered in the order of its entry. No vicious animal will be entered, unless the owner takes measures to prevent any possible damage otherwise resulting therefrom. Animals or articles on exhibition cannot be removed before the close of the Fair, without permission from the Managers. Premiums not demanded within six months after they are awarded, will be held as donations to the Society.

INSTRUCTIONS TO JUDGES.—The Judges are requested to report themselves at the Secretary's office, on the ground, on the first day, before 3 o'clock, P. M., at which time their names will be called, and vacancies (if any) They will report by the number on the article exhibited, and, in awarding Premiums, be governed by the printed lists furnished them by the Secretary. They shall require such evidence from exhibitors, relative to the stock or articles on exhibition, as shall be to them entirely satisfactory.

Any deception in the statements of exhibitors, shall when discovered make a forfeiture of the premium, to which the party making it would otherwise be entitled.

All the articles specified in classes Nos. 10, 11 and 13 must have been manufactured in the County, in order to entitle them to premiums. Also, all animals entitled to premiums, must be such as have been raised in the County, or owned and kept therein for at least six months prior to the Fair.

No article exhibited shall be entitled to two premiums as, for instance, the best bushel of grain, receiving the premium, shall not be included in the best acre on which a premium is
