

FOR THE FARMER.

From Graham's Magazine. The Voice of Autumn.

There comes from yonder height, A soft repining sound, Where forests leaves are bright, And fall like flakes of light, To the ground.

It is the Autumn breeze, That lightly floating on, Just skims the weedy leas, Just stirs the glowing trees, And is gone.

He moans by sedgey brook, And visits with a sigh, The last pale flowers that look, From out their sunny nook, At the sky.

O'er shouting children flies, That light October wind, And, kissing cheeks and eyes, He leaves their merry cries, Far behind.

And wanders on to make That soft uneasy sound, By distant wood and lake, Where distant fountains break From the ground.

No bower where maidens dwell Can win a moment's stay; Nor fair untrodden dell; He sweeps the upland swell, And away!

Mourn'st thou thy homeless state, Oh soft, repining wind! That early seek'st and late The rest it is thy fate Not to find?

Not on the mountain's breast, Not on the ocean's shore, In all the East and West;— The wind that stops to rest Is no more.

By valleys, woods, and springs, No wonder thou should'st grieve For all the glorious things Thou touchest with thy wings, And must leave.

Bearing Year of Apple-Trees. The bearing of apple trees in alternate years is so general in all the older States, that it has come to be considered a necessity.

With some trees the habit is so inveterate that not a solitary apple can be found upon the branches in the unfruitful year.

The whole energies of the tree and the resources of the soil seem to be exhausted in the fruitful years, so that it takes two seasons of hibernation and rest to recuperate.

This habit is a great drawback upon the profits of fruit growing. In the abundant years apples are cheap, and the farmer gets but a fair return for his labor.

In the scarce year, when prices are high, he has no fruit to sell. Some facts have come under our observation that leads us to suppose this habit can be overcome, and that the skillful fruit-grower can rely upon a crop of apples every year, with as much certainty as upon any of the root and grain crops.

In the front yard of the homestead there stood an old apple tree in a deep rich loam. It was kept in grass, and bore a large crop of early apples in alternate years, yielding nothing in the interval.

By way of experimenting, the green sward was broken up, and the whole yard manured and planted as a garden. To the great disappointment of all the skeptics in the region, the old tree changed its habits, and bore very full crops two years in succession.

The yard was seeded down and it relapsed, but continued to bear in the years which would have been barren in the old order. When a young orchard is put out upon a piece of recently cleared woodland, where there is abundance of vegetable matter in the soil, it bears with much more uniformity every year than an old orchard under common treatment in the same vicinity.

Orchards planted in the new settlements are much more productive than those in the older States, for the same reason. The trees find aliment enough in the virgin soil to mature good crops every year.

Nothing pays better for care and attention than the apple. A single acre in this fruit, kept in good heart, by manuring and cultivation, will yield more profit than ten acres neglected in the ordinary way.

The only secret in having apples abundant every year, is in keeping the trees clean, and in feeding them. He who has plenty of muck, peat, lime, or ashes, and stable manure, need not go off his own premises to find plant food for his orchard.

The breaking up of old orchards, and the application of a compost of these materials will work wonders. Nothing but root crops should ever be attempted in an orchard. The fruit and the grain want similar constituents. We have seen apple trees put back for years by a rye crop.

The present month is a good time to begin the work of renovating old orchards, and reforming their bearing habits. Dig about and dung the bearing trees, before you decide to cut them down as "cumberers of the ground."—Agriculturist.

To MAKE GOOD COFFEE.—Put two ounces of freshly ground coffee into a small saucepan over a gentle fire, stirring occasionally until the coffee is thoroughly heated. Then pour over it a pint of boiling water, covering closely that the aroma may not escape.

Let it stand near the fire from four to six minutes; now strain the coffee very gently through a piece of thick gauze; warm it again over the fire, add hot milk and sugar (crystallized is the best) and serve it at table.

FOR THE LADIES.

Be Gentle to thy Husband!

Be gentle, there are hours when he By anxious care is tossed; And shadows deep lie on his brow, By business trials crossed.

Be gentle, 'tis for you he toils, And thinks, and strives to gain Home comforts and home happiness— Don't let him strive in vain.

Be gentle, though some hasty word Should fall, it was not meant; A smile, a kind word will recall, And many more prevent.

Be gentle, oh! 't will soothe much care, And make each burden light, A gentle tone will smooth the brow, And draw an answer bright.

Be gentle, though it may seem hard, To check an angry word; Yet try, and it will surely bring A full and rich reward.

The Mock Marriage. Early this morning there was added to our company of travellers a pair who looked like runaways: the gentleman was a tall, raw-boned specimen of the "half horse, half alligator" class, and the lady a fair match for him.

Among the passengers from Napoleon is a solemn-looking gentleman, who has all along been taken for a preacher. About nine o'clock last night I was conversing with the "reverend" gentleman, when a young man stepped up, and addressing him, remarked:

"We're going to have a wedding, and would like to have you officiate." "All right sir," he replied laughingly, and we stepped into the ladies' cabin, where sure enough, the couple stood waiting.

There had been some "finger sucking games" and several mock marriages gone through with during the evening, and I supposed this was merely a continuation of the sport; so thought the "preacher" who, I could see, had a good deal of humor in him, and was inclined to promote general good feeling and merriment.

The couple stood up before him, (a good deal more solemn than was necessary in a mock marriage, I thought) and the "preacher" asked the necessary questions, and then, proceeding in the usual way, announced them "husband and wife."

There was a good deal of fun afterward, and when it was over I left the cabin—and so did the "preacher," who remarked to me that he liked to see young folks enjoying themselves, and took a great deal of pleasure in contributing to their fun; but he did not understand why they should select him to act the preacher.

Just then some one called me aside, and the old gentleman stepped into his state-room, which was next to mine. When I returned, the door stood open, and the "preacher" stood just inside, with his coat and vest off, and one boot in his hand, talking with the gentleman who played the "attendant," and who, as I came up, remarked:

"Well, if that is the case, it is a good joke, for they are in dead earnest, and have retired to the same state-room." The old gentleman raised both hands, as he exclaimed:

"Good heavens! you don't tell me so!" and rushing, just as he was, boot in hand, to the state-room indicated, commenced an assault on the door as if he would batter it down, exclaiming at each lick— "For Heaven's sake, don't! I ain't a preacher!"

The whole cabin was aroused, every state-room flying open with a slam, when the door opened, and the "Arkansas traveller," poking out his head, coolly remarked:

"Old hoss, you're rather too late!" A Stray Yankee's Mistake. A well-dressed Yankee, supposed to be the "Man With the Carpet Bag," as he had one of those useful articles with him, walked into the Seventeenth Ward station house on Sunday night, and asked for "lodgings."

Capt. Hartt saw that he was rather above the usual class of patrons of his establishment, but supposing he might be hard up, told the doorman to give him a place by himself.

Yankee registered his name in due form, and then turning to the turkey, said— "Here, waiter, take my baggage." The latter, who began to scent a joke, shouldered the carpet-bag, and bade the gentleman follow him.

On his way down stairs, the stranger was conducted through a large room filled with the usual complement of bear-eyed women, belated boot-blacks, and greasy loafers, who find their nightly shelter in the station-house, some of whom audibly remarked that he "put on too many airs for a bummer."

Before he could tell what to think of a hotel that accommodated so motley a crew, his conductor swung open one of the grated cell doors, and invited him to step into his apartment.

"Waal," he exclaimed, catching his breath with astonishment, "if this ain't the d—dest funniest hotel I ever see—rooms in the cellar, eh! I swan, I think it's a jail, after all; waiter, ain't it?" "No, sir!" responded the doorman, with a laugh, "it's a station-house!"

"What!" screamed the Yankee, "a per-lease station, by Jeemini!" and seizing his carpet-bag, amid shouts of laughter, he rushed out at a 2.40 pace, and soon disappeared in the darkness.—N. Y. Trib.
