

FOR THE FARMER.

The Consumption of Wheat.

In several agricultural addresses we have read recently, a fair was expressed by the speakers, that the future prospects of wheat growers were not very flattering; that as the Liverpool market was the great price regulator of other European and the American markets, and as there was no prospect of very high rates being maintained there except in adverse season, therefore wheat growing was not likely to be a permanently profitable business in this country, especially as new lands were constantly coming into market, and the wheat product was largely on the increase in the west. Fortunately for the agricultural interest, the greatest in this country, this is not a true statement of the case. The fact is the consumption of wheat is steadily outstripping its production. This the census returns of 1859 will show beyond all possibility of doubt, and the reason for it is obvious to all of us. We live in a trading and a manufacturing age. The metal energy of the country runs constantly in those directions, and the tendency of our people is to live by headwork rather than hand work. The Yankee is an industrious fellow, but he is much more at home behind a desk, than behind a plow, and the statistics of New England prove that this is the case. In 1849 New England raised two million bushels of wheat, in 1859 it has fallen off to one million bushels, and notwithstanding the increase of population, it is doubtful whether it raises anything like that amount now.

In the south cotton growing is absorbing the labor of the country, and the states of Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia and Alabama, which raised 12,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1849; fell off to 5,000,000 bushels in 1859; and we do not believe that these states raised 2,000,000 bushels last year. The fact is the eastern wheat lands are constantly running out every year, and the manufacturing and trading population of the older states, are becoming more and more dependent on the west for its food. In times past the ratio of the increase in the production of breadstuffs has been but 2 1/2 per cent., while consumption has increased at the rate of 5 per cent., but we firmly believe that the next census will prove a still greater difference.

Let the farmers therefore go the work with a will, let them prepare to seed more wheat, corn, and barley, than ever before, as in all human probability, prices are destined to advance as the year rolls around.—Rockford News.

PROTECTION OF STRAWBERRIES IN WINTER.—In protecting the strawberry there may be too much of a good thing.—All varieties of this fruit that we have ever experimented with, benefited by covering. They come out in the Spring earlier, and seem to start stronger, but many who are not acquainted with the habits of the plant, kill them with kindness. They pile on coarse manure, straw, leaves, or fine sea-weed, until the plants are smothered. While the plant is in its inactive state, there is little to prevent it from decomposing, by the action of heat and moisture, like other vegetable matter. An examination of a plant taken from under a manure heap, would show that the leaves and crown had rotted.

The strawberry in its unacclimated state grows among the grasses, which in their decay, form all the protection the plant needs. Nature provides but a light covering to shield it from the sudden changes of the atmosphere. For this purpose all most any coarse litter, pea or bean vines, corn stalks, or sea-weed, kept in place by poles or brush, are good enough. They must have air in Winter as well in Summer.—Am. Agriculturist.

PLOWING LAND IN THE FALL FOR CORN.—S. M. Brown, of Onondaga—I grow corn cheaper than I did fifteen years ago. I plow in the fall eight to ten inches deep, in gravelly loam. I mellow it in the spring with a cultivator, and do most of the cultivation with the same implement. I grow near 100 bushels per acre this year, and it won't cost me over ten and a half cents per bushel. I think farmers would do well to depend more on corn.—I manure by top-dressing with compost, using salt, plaster, and unbleached ashes, with barnyard manure. Muck sward not over four years old. I consider the fodder equal to two and a half tons of hay per acre.

SOILING COWS.—Hon. Josiah Quincy says, one of the advantages gained by soiling is the saving of land. One acre will support three cows during the soiling season. The cows are turned out but two hours, morning and evening, and the balance of the time they are kept in the stables. They keep healthy, and yield more milk annually, than cows usually do. One man will take care of, feed, water, clean and milk twenty cows. They are fed four or five times a day.

CHELSEANS.—To cure chilblains, simply bathe the parts affected in the liquor in which potatoes have been boiled, at as high a temperature as can be borne. On the first appearance of ailment, indicated by inflammation and irritation, this bath affords almost immediate relief. In more advanced stages, repetition prevents breaking out.

TRANSPARENT CEMENT FOR GLASS.—Dissolve one part by weight of India Rubber in 64 of Chloroform; then add 16 to the parts powdered gum Mastic. This heartily kept warm for two days, and it to be a grade.
