

FOR THE FARMER.

Sermon for Farmers.

And now, farmers, have you done justice to your profession, to your families, and to your country, for the last year? To your profession—have you cultivated your grounds with all the assiduity and zeal of which you are susceptible? Have you called to your aid all the agricultural reading within your reach, and taken advice from those of your neighbors who are competent to give it? Are your farms generally in a better condition than they were one year ago? Are your fields better laid out and enclosed—useless stones removed—your waste ground less—your ditches opened—and the general surface of the ground better adapted for the raising of crops? Has your land been made richer, to enable it to yield more, and have you collected a large amount of materials? To increase your annual stock of manure? Are your houses more comfortable, besides being of a neater appearance, than the labors of the year? Have you added to the conveniences and safety of your barns, to make them better adapted to the purposes for which they were built? Again: has your stock of cattle and horses improved, not only in number, but more in quality and appearance, and consequently in value? Have you selected and do you raise the best kinds of sheep?—we mean those kinds that are most profitable to the owner? Have you the best breed of hogs, and do you carry just so many through the winter as best conduces to your interest? In short, have you so farmed in all things that you have no cause of regret, because you have given to all a proper degree of attention and care?

If so, we congratulate you; but if not so—if you have not done one, a part or all, of those things, the year has been, in a measure, lost to you, and you have not done justice to your farm or your profession. Take another year of probation, turn it to better account, and let your diligence give evidence of a thorough reformation. But if experience cannot teach, and the prospect of harassing debts hereafter cannot induce you to a noble industry—you will soon become an evil in a neighborhood, your example will be injurious to others, and your slothfulness and unthriftiness will assuredly lay your farm under a cumbersome mortgage; and this imposed, the next step is a disposal of it by a creditor at auction.

We turn from such, and ask next, Have you for the last year done your duty to your family? That is, have you made the labors of the farm as cheerful to all your dependants as circumstances would allow? Have you been so far kind and indulgent as was consistent with the proper management of a well regulated household? Have you attended to the education of your children and apprentices, and as far as one short year would allow, given them all the opportunities to acquire information that may be useful to them hereafter in their several pursuits, and that with intelligence they may support the free institutions of our country? If you have done this, you have done your duty; but let us at the same time remark, that education is on the advance; what was necessary for our generation, is not enough for them. The march of intellect is onward, and our present attainments are comparatively small, and all will be still more undervalued, in advance of the generation to come.

Have you done your duty to your country? Have you given the necessary aid that the good of society demands at your hands—to the bridges, roads, public improvements in your respective neighborhoods, to schools, seminaries of learning, public morals, and religious institutions? These are all great and important duties, and a well-regulated community ought not to be slighted or forgotten. Society cannot flourish without them—they are the stamina that give stability and health to our country and its government, and that man is unfit for associated life, he is wanting in principle, and reckless of consequences, who will not lend his aid to the attainment of these great and important objects.

COMFORTS FOR CATTLE.—Good stables, good food, and good water, are the prime comforts for cattle in winter. For summer, whatever else they may have, how can they get along without a scratching pole? Rev. Sydney Smith, of England, was something of a farmer, and used to visit his cattle daily, and feed them and pet them until they knew his voice, and welcome his coming. He used to do all in his power to make them comfortable. He has been heard to say, "I am for all cheap luxuries, even for animal; now all animals have a passion for scratching their back bones; they break down your gates and palling to effect this. Look! this is my universal scratcher, a sharp-edged pole, resting on a high and low post, adapted to every height from a horse to a lamb. Even the Edinburgh Reviewer can take his turn; you have no idea how popular it is. I have not had a gate broken since I put it up. I have it in all my fields."

FINE GINGERBREADS.—Rub one pound of butter well into three pounds of flour; then add one pound of powdered sugar, one pound of molasses, two ounces of ground ginger, and one nutmeg grated. Warm a quarter of a pint of cream, and mix all together. Make it into a stiff paste, and bake it in a slow oven.

Bulwer calls a newspaper "the common reservoir in which every stream pours its living waters, and at which every man may come to drink."
