

FORTHE FARMER.

Interesting Facts for Farmers.

We take from a long article by a correspondent in the New England Farmer, the following extract, which we are sure will be perused with interest by our agricultural readers:

Every practical, observing tiller of the soil well understands that no guano, superphosphate or other nitrogenous or highly concentrated manures, can restore to the soil the lost carbon, which has supplied a succession of crops, with the essential materials which enter into the fourteen elements of grain, fruit and grass. The true principle of agricultural science introduces another system, natural, plain and altogether dissimilar. The forest must give up her stores of carbon, (and she manufactures a large surplus annually,) so freely elaborated by nature's laws as to fix its ammonia, and yet fitted for a powerful absorbent of liquid manures, with power to resist decomposition until brought in contact with the roots of plants. The swamps must yield up their store of vegetable wealth, the rich inorganic materials of surrounding hills and forests, to reunite with the mineral salts too firmly fixed in the soil to be washed away by the annual rains. The organic laws of the universe established by the Creator, for the government of all the changes and formal conditions of properties of matter, whether in a crude mineral, organized or detached condition, are as uniform and unerring as the physical laws that govern the rising and setting of the sun. As the demand for carbon to form fat, muscle, cellular tissue, bone, brain, hair and other portions of the human body, and at the same time keep up an animal heat of 98° night and day, is very great, we readily see why search is so abundant in all plants used as food for man or beast. Starch contains a large amount of carbon, and the forests and swamps of the old States are holding the great bulk of carbon in store, to-day. We must increase the productiveness of rural labor by introducing into the present mode of farming more system in the science of vegetable physiology.

Every one knows that new land land never subjected to cultivation, will produce in abundance all the crops which that country or district is susceptible of producing. Hence we are advised that the forests and swamps of any hilly country hold its vegetable wealth. Science now comes to our aid, and teaches us how to change a cold subsoil into a warm, pliable, productive, surface soil. Practical experience has taught us that a good soil which produces 100 pounds of ripe wheat plants, loses but 15 pounds of its weight and substance by the operation, 85 pounds coming from the atmosphere. Science reveals to us why it is that in combustion, respiration and decomposition, an immense amount of organized matter is dissipated through the air—infused into plants by atmospheric pressure, or gathered up by the falling dews, rains and snows, returned to the earth and the roots of plants, and thence by capillary attraction drawn into the kernel and elaborated as food for man and beast. It also gives the agriculturist power over heat, light, electricity, (positive and negative,) chemical action, air, earth and water, and enables him to grapple with repulsive elements—cold, subsoil water, (corrected by drainage,) malaria, and other negative influences which have baffled the unskilful farmer for years past. Now that the soil, in the old States, has lost its natural productiveness, a thorough knowledge of agricultural science is indisputably necessary to enable the tiller of the soil to compete with those who till the rich field of the virgin West.

A WINTER HINT.—It must never be forgotten by the farmer that there are works of charity and kindness, that more frequently press their claims upon him during the winter, than at any other time. While his happy family is clustered round the cheerful hearth; while his table is loaded with the bounties which a kind Providence, personal industry, and a fruitful soil have given him; while his wood-house is filled, his granaries overflowing, and every reasonable want supplied; he must not forget there are other less favored individuals or families around; children destitute of fire and wood; widows and orphans distressed and destitute, all requiring care, and not to be forsaken while the frosts of winter are upon earth. For the poor there must be employment; for the destitute there must be a supply; and the honest and industrious, or the unfortunate poor, have claims on the more fortunate, that may not be disregarded. Well directed charity is one of the few acts of life in which both the giver and the receiver are blessed; let no one then forget the poor.

RECLAIMING LANDS FOR GARDENING IN NEW JERSEY.—A bill is now before the Legislature of New Jersey, at Trenton, to incorporate a joint stock company, for the purpose of draining and so improving the Hackensack meadows as to fit the whole of that now useless and unpleasant tract for occupation; and thereby add to the area of land adapted for the cultivation of farm and garden products, some 12,000 or 15,000 acres of the very best quality, and lying within an average distance of five or six miles of the market house in Newark.—Newark Advertiser.

"JANUARY THAW."—The "January thaw" of 1859 will long be remembered. It has been in operation so many times this month, that the "weather-wise" are puzzled to tell which is the "January thaw."
