

Miscellany. Love--A Picture.

Have you seen the water lily Sleeping on its peaceful bed, When the blushing waters trembled With the evening's tint of red; Marked it resting in its beauty, While the golden tinge of night Seated a flood of glowing glory To its meek and stainless white? Then you've seen the tints of beauty That were netting o'er her cheek, When she bent her timid love-lock On me with expression meek.

A DOUBLE ELOPEMENT.—A well-to-do farmer from Columbia county went to New York not long since, to reclaim a daughter who had run away from his domicile with a young husband, whose throat the affectionate old gentleman had threatened to cut from ear to ear. It seems that the mother—the widowed mother—of this fugacious son-in-law was a youthful sweetheart of the said old gentleman, and jilted him in a peculiarly cruel manner. Hence his hatred of her son, and his wrath when he found that his only daughter, whose dying mother had confided her to his tender care, had married that son, and his threat to cut that son's throat.

The irrefutable father-in-law had but little difficulty in finding the boarding-house of the youthful pair, but was deterred from visiting them by learning that they were guarded by the widow herself—his old and faithless betrothed. After some skirmishing, however, he one day ventured to ring at the door, when he supposed the widow had gone out, and he was ushered into the parlor where the widow herself was sitting. With a deep frown he turned to retire, but was detained by a small hand laid gently upon his arm. It was the widow's hand. They were soon seated—not far apart. Explanation was satisfactory—she always loved him. Why was he so rash as to marry another before she had time to explain?

It was rash, he admitted; nay, more—wrong; and he was not the man to let a wrong be unrighted if he could right it; so there he was, old to be sure, but tough and rich, and having much life and service in him yet. Would she help him to set matters right? Of course she would. She was not the one to balk the good intentions of a repentant sinner. But what would the young folks say? "No matter," said the tough old fellow, "we'll elope; we have as good a right as they had." Capital idea—should be carried out immediately.

They packed up the widow's trunk, called a hack, caught an evening train, reached Columbia county in safety, were married, and sent their cards to the astonished young couple in New York, who had become greatly alarmed at the widow's prolonged and unaccountable absence. The old gentleman was so well pleased with his coup of matrimony that he pardoned his daughter and son-in-law.—Catskill Examiner.

ORIGIN OF THE NAMES OF SOME OF THE STATES.—Maine was so called as early as 1638, from Maine, in France, of which Henrietta Maria, Queen of England, was at that time proprietor. New Hampshire was the name given to the territory conveyed by the Plymouth Company to Captain John Mason, by patent, November 7, 1639, with reference to the patentee, who was Governor of Portsmouth, in Hampshire, England. Vermont was so called from the French word, green, and mont, mountain. Massachusetts, from a tribe of Indians in the neighborhood of Boston: the tribe is thought to have derived its name from the Blue Hills of Milton—"I have learned," says Roger Williams, "that Massachusetts was so called from the Blue Hills." Rhode Island was named in 1644, in reference to the island of Rhodes, in the Mediterranean. Connecticut was so called from the Indian name of its principal river, New York in reference to the Duke of York and Albany, to whom this territory was granted. Pennsylvania was named in 1681 after William Penn, it being a combination of Penn and sylvania, a wood, meaning Penn's wood or forest. Delaware in 1703, from Delaware Bay, on which it lies, and which received its name from Lord De La War, who died on this bay; Maryland, in honor of Henrietta Maria, Queen of Charles I. in his patent to Lord Baltimore, June 30, 1632. Virginia was named in 1584, after Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen of England; Carolina, by the French in 1564, in honor of King Charles IX, of France, whose name in Latin is Carolus; Georgia, in 1732, in honor of King George III; Alabama, in 1817, from its principal river, the name signifying "Here we rest;" Mississippi, in 1809, from its western boundary: Mississippi is said to denote whole river, or fathers of waters, that is, formed by the union of many. Louisiana, so called in honor of Louis XVI of France; Tennessee, in 1796, from its principal river; the word Tennessee is said to signify a curved spoon; Illinois, in 1809, from its principal river: the word is said to signify the river of men; Indiana, in 1802, from Indian. Florida was so called by Juan Ponce de Leon, in 1572, because it was discovered on Easter Sunday: in Spanish, Pascua Florida.

When bent on matrimony, look more than skin deep for beauty, dive further than the pocket for worth, and search for temper beyond the humor of the moment—remembering it is not always the most agreeable partner at the ball who forms the most amiable partner for life. Virtue blooms often in the shade.
