THERMOMETRICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Table with 4 columns: Time (7 A.M., 12 M., 6 P.M., A.V.G.), and 4 rows of temperature data for various days.

LOCALETTES.—The following is the opinion of Stephen Girard on the subject of advertising: "I have always considered advertising liberally and long—to be the great medium of success in business, and the prelude to wealth. And I have made it an invariable rule, too, to advertise in the duller times, a long experience having taught me that money thus spent is well laid out; as keeping my business constantly before the public has secured me many sales I otherwise would have lost."

—That mud-puddle before the barber's shop and that "crossing" to which we adverted once or twice, we are happy to see, have been repaired. Apples and peaches are very abundant in our market. The former sell for fifty cents, and the latter for one dollar, per bushel. Strange to say, however, notwithstanding the cheapness of the articles, not one of fruit-dealers has had the courage to lay on our table a bushel or two, &c., &c.—A boy ten years of age, named Jimmy Cats, living near Tyrone, was bitten on the leg by a spotted snake while alone in a field, a few days since. With great presence of mind, he immediately took his pocket-knife and cut out the place that was bitten; and he has sustained no harm from the poison.

—Among the list of brakemen who have recently been promoted on the Pa. Railroad, we notice the name of L. M'Kee, of Cambria county.—A new paper is to be started in Huntingdon soon. It will advocate the election of Bell and Everett. —Holidaysburg is pestered with chick-thieves.—A trial of skill between two rival dancers for a stake of ten dollars came off in town one night last week.—They danced and danced—first one step, then another, jigs, break-downs, reels, quadrilles, slowsteps, and no-steps—until they reduced themselves to a charming state of exhaustion. The referee then declared that he was unable to decide which was the better man on the "light fantasia," so he fairly settled the matter by retaining one dollar from each of the V.'s, to "test the lockers on with"—The Hollidaysburg Register is informed that Cambria county is not a large grape-growing county. If we were to rely on our claims for distinction on our vine-growing prominence, the Mountain County would turn out to be no great shakes. When we read that that crop would be large this fall, we meant that it would be large in proportion to the number of our vines. "Big fancy neighbor?"—Another of those curious semi-occasional changes in the spots of the boys occurs about this time. For a month or so the only pastime they will indulge in will be the one called "book apples," or pears, peaches, plums, &c., as the case may be.—Our young friend, James A. Kittell, had one of his hands severely injured one day last week, by being caught in a thrashing machine.—Col. Jack Frost paid us a visit on Sunday night. He did no damage, however, as far as heard from.—We observe that the ties for the Eb. & Cresson Railroad are being hauled. These books like business.—Two negroes got into a quarrel at Johnstown, one day last week, in the course of which one cut the other with a knife, severely but not dangerously injuring him. They were both committed to jail.—On Tuesday morning, Miss Louise E. Vickroy delivered to a large and appreciative audience our citizens her lecture on the "Poetry and Poets of America." She gave an interesting and instructive sketch of the life and progress of poetry in America, and quoted largely from our principal poets. Her address was a masterly effort, and reflects great credit on the talented authoress.—The foliage of the forest has already begun to fade, and soon the summer will be ended.—A slight spring of snow fell in this place on Wednesday morning. The time for overcoats and hats has almost arrived.

A BIG STORY SHELVED.—The Pittsburg Chronicle, after publishing our account of the discovery of the supposed-to-be petrified bones of an elephant which were dug up on the line of the Eb. & Cresson R. R. a short time since, proceeds to comment on it under the above startling title in the following style:

We observe the above going the rounds of the papers, and will state what we know about these huge remains. While at Cresson we heard reports of these wonderful bone discoveries, and wishing to adorn our columns with a full and reliable description of them, determined to visit the locality where they were stated to have been found. On Sunday, in company with A. S. Bell, of this city, and Mr. Lee, of Philadelphia, one of the most distinguished mineralogists of this country and President of the Philadelphia Academy of Science, we started out in search of the mammoth petrification. About a mile and a half from Cresson we came upon the new track of the Cresson and Ebensburg road, and by following it half a mile, we reached an Irish shanty and inquired of its occupant for the petrified bones. He said most of them had been carried off to Ebensburg, but showed us some few that still remained at the bottom of a deep cutting which was being made.—We were then showing some bunches of common limestone, of a rather singular form, it is true, but looking as much like an "elephant's foot" as like a bushel measure. They had not the slightest appearance of, and certainly were not petrifications. If the legs, &c., which were alleged to have been discovered, were of the same substance, those who started the new animal story were as badly "sold" as were we who had walked two miles to see some round stones. Mr. Lee had no occasion to use his little geological hammer which he always carries with him, and which by the way, has a singular history that we may one day relate, but turned on his foot disgusted, and we all took the back track "sadder but wiser men."

We will acknowledge that the editor was badly sold—somehow or other. But the editor and his friends should not have taken it for granted that any singular-looking stone that might by chance be picked up and shown them was the same as our own unapproachable, perfectly-developed and fearfully and wonderfully made mammoth petrification. Localities are very jealous, and as soon as it became known that Ebensburg was to be the possessor of this gem in the bone line, such-and-such places determined to throw cold water on the notoriety it would give us, to manufacture absurd stories, and make the whole thing out to be a huge humbug. This may account for the manner in which you were taken in. In the meantime, Ebensburg still contains THE ORIGINAL AND AUTHENTIC THE ORIGINAL AND AUTHENTIC MAMMOTH PETRIFIED BONE. MAMMOTH PETRIFIED BONE.

Lovers of the Singular—devotees at the shrine of the Rare in Nature—come to Ebensburg if you wish to "see sights." SEE HERE.—We have been requested to state to parents and others that there exists in the minds of a majority of the juveniles of this place a singular desire to tear down or deface handbills. This, besides being a senseless procedure in itself, is a great annoyance to persons who advertise in that way. What use is it to post up bills for people to read, if they are to be torn down immediately? The fact is, this vandalism must be stopped. And as an incentive to this consummation so devoutly to be wished, allow us to state that a heavy fine can be imposed for this little thing of tearing and defacing handbills; and moreover, that a gentleman has signified his intention of putting the law in force on some unlucky wight.

CORRECTION.—Some time since we published an account of an accident on the Penna. Railroad, near Lily's station, in this county, in which we stated that the watchman was killed outright. As will be seen by the following, we were slightly mistaken:

JUST THE THING.—For the past few days, C. R. Jones, has been selling his stock of boots and shoes, hats and caps, clothing, &c., at cost for cash at private sale. His doors are still open to those who wish to avail themselves of this generous procedure. A person can buy cheap enough from him any time; but when he reduces the prices still further, what a run of customers shouldn't he get! We hope the public will avail themselves of this chance to secure bargains.

THIEVES ABOUT!—We learn from a Washington township correspondent that the house of Mr. Samuel Long, at No. 2. Old portage R. R., was entered by some thievish individual on last Saturday night week, and robbed of two pounds of candles. An attempt was made by the same person to cut out a quilt which was in the frames; but Mr. Long, hearing the noise, arose, and when the rascal decamped.

The following ode to Cambria was written by a lady, who, although absent from our hospitable shores, still retains a vivid recollection of what a fine old place it is:

To Cambria.

Old Cambria! though now I roam Far, far from thee, my childhood's home, My heart still fondly clings to thee— Thou art a sacred name to me. O'er thy green hills how oft I've strayed; 'Neath thy green trees how oft I've played; The verdant meads, I loved them too; And the forest, where the wild fowls grew And birds sang sweetly o'er summer's heat Were oft to me a sweet retreat. Long years have passed since then, and yet Sweet, sad, sad feeling of regret Comes o'er my heart when'er I hear Thy cherished name, O Cambria dear. And oft my memory brings to mind The dear old home I left behind— The grassy mound, the mossy dell, The murmuring brook where I loved well To pass the happy hours away; When life was but a summer's day, When all things seemed so fair to view, And my young heart no sorrow knew. Alas! those days are gone and past, And pleasures seem to fly as fast; There's nothing here but must decay, Death robs us of our dearest treasures, And sorrows mar our sweetest pleasures. Dark clouds obscure the brightest sky, Sweet flowers bloom but for to die. This earth so green, on which we tread, Is but a tomb where sleep the dead. Then let us lift our hearts above— There all is peace, there all is love. Oh, sweet the promise to us given, The Christian has a home in heaven. Isez.

He has just received a new supply, embracing standard works in every department of literature. Particular attention is directed to the fact that he has private sales during the day, when articles are sold at auction prices.
