Never to ridicule sacred things, or what ford's Hotel. others may esteem such, however absurd they may appear.

Never to show levity when people are professedly engaged in worship. Never to resent a supposed injury till I know the views and motives of the author of it; nor on any account to retaliate. Never to judge a person's character by external appearance.

Always take the part of an absent person who is censured in company; so far as truth and propriety will allow.

Never to think the worse of another on necount of his differing from me in political or religious opinions.

Not to dispute with a man more than seventy years of age, nor with a woman, nor an enthusiast. Not to affect to be witty, or to jest so as to wound the feelings of another. To say as little as possible of myself, and those who are near to me.

Not to obtrude my advice unasked. Never to court the favor of the rich by flattering either their vanity or their vices.

As a steamboat was about to start from Cincinnati one day, a young man came on board, leading a blushing damsel clerk, said in a suppressed voice:-

"I say, me and my wife have just got married, and I'm looking for accommodations."

"Looking for a berth?" hastily inquired the clerk, passing tickets out to other pas-

"A birth! thunder and lightning, no!" gasped the astonished man, "we hain't but just got married; we want a place to stay all night, you know."

THE MINISTER AND THE BLUE COCK-ADE.-A very conservative and genial minister of this city, meeting one of his young friends on the street, looked with some curiosity upon what struck him as a blue rose on his hat, and inquired what it | meant. "Sir," said the young blood, "that is a blue cockade." "Cockade?" echoed the minister. "Yes, sir; blue cockade -That's all right, ain't it, sir?" "Yes," said the minister, "all right, all right on the goose." The young man has not been seen since.
