The French Regimental Barber.

A peculiarity of the French army is the regimental barber, who nearly always sorves his apprenticeship on the cheeks of his brothers in arms; and it is a rough apprenticeship as far as the cheeks are concerned. We would not wish our worst enemy to come under his razor to try his lightness of hand. Before entering the service he was probably a mechanic, a carpenter or mason; his good conduct has obtained him the important post of barber, and henceforth he wields scissors and razor with more conscientiousness than success. This post is one of the most envied in the regiment, and the man that holds it is no little proud of it. In the first place, he receives a monthly pay resulting from small stoppages of the soldiers; next, he has permanent leave till 10 o'clock, P. M.; and lastly, he is exempted from a good deal of duty. But it must not be supposed that the office is a sinecure; the barber is responsible for all the heads of the company; if the beards are too long, or the hair beyond the regu lation length, he is responsible for it .-There are the regulations he must carry them out to the letter; hold an inspection, and shear his comrades as close as possible, frequently much against their

There are men very fond of their hair, that natural ornament of man. The smart soldier would like to wear his hair long perhaps that a young lady's hand may ruffle his curls; but the regulations are pitiless. Said a worthy corporal cnce: "From the moment that the hair is seizable by the hand it requires to be cut." All sorts of schemes are naturally employed by the natty trooper to save his hair; he wets it every morning, or fastens it down on his forehead with cosmetics. But his labor is in vain; the officers are up to their tricks, and the delinquent and responsible barber generally get four nights' guard-room. The old foxes do not have resource to these clumsy methods, but pretend to be deaf, thus obtaining from the surgeon-major permission to wear long hair. Review days are terrible to the barber, for in less than two hours he must shave two hundred beards, without counting the hair-cutting. He should be seen then with his sleeves tucked up to the elbows, armed with his tremendous the elbows, armed with his tremendous R. BUNN, M. The barber is a conscientious man; if he cut off the tip of an flayer, though in a low voice, for if he were to hear them he holds vengance in his hands. In all the regiments that have fought in Algeria the barber has a tortoise-shell for a soap-dish.

Innoxious in all maladies in which it has been tried, it has proved absolutely curative in each of the following complaints, viz:

In Debility, Nervous Affections, Emaciation Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diarrhaa, Dysentery, Incipient Consumption, Scrofulous Tuberculosis, Salt Rheum, Mismenstruction, Whites, Chlorosis, Liver Complaints, Chronic Headaches, Rheu matism, Intermittent Fevers, Pimples on the Face. elc.

In cases of GENERAL DEBILITY, whether the result of acute diseases, or of the continued diminution of nervous and muscular energy from chronic complaints, on trial of this restorative has proved successful to an extent would render credible. Invalids so long bedridden as to have become forgotten in their own neighborhoods, have suddenly reappeared in the busy world as if just returned from protracted travel in a distant land. Some very signal instances of this kind are attested of female sufferers, emaciated victims of appatent marasmus, sanguineous exhaustion, critical changes, and that complication of nervous and dyspeptic aversion to air and exercise for which the physician has no name.

In Nervous Affections of all kinds, and for reasons familiar to medical men, the operation of this preparation of iron must necessarily be salutary, for, unlike the old oxides, it is vigorously tonic, without being exciting and overheating; and gently, regularly aperient, even in the most obstinate cases of costiveness, without ever being a gastric purgative, or inflicting a disagreable sensation.

It is this latter property, among others, which makes it so remarkably effectual and permanent-a remedy for Piles, upon which it also appears to exert a distinct and specific action, by dispersing the local tendency which forms
