

ODDS & ENDS.

HOW THE REBEL CHIVALRY WAS SUSTAINED - A newspaper correspondent, writing from Pittsburg Landing, gives the following description of the manner in which the courage of the "chivalry" was brought to the sticking-point in that battle:

A rebel officer, among our prisoners, states that a general order was issued to their troops, instructing them particularly to pick off our officers. Meantime the rebel officers dressed, almost to a man, in the coats or overcoats of privates, and thus prudently avoided danger, while our unchivalrous Northern officers mostly wore their insignia of rank as usual. I do not say that the rebel course did not indicate commendable prudence, and that our officers did not display more valor than wisdom by making themselves targets for sharpshooters; but it is well enough the high-strung Southerners should be taught that the tables have turned when they put on old clothes to save their precious lives, and "Northern Lincolnites" play the chivalric role of going into battle and dying "with their robes of office all upon them."

It was curious to notice, too, the different styles of fighting, so characteristic of their respective sections, adopted by Northern and Southern soldiers. On Monday our advance was slow, steady and sure. The rebels, on the other hand, came dashing against our advancing lines, hurling themselves into the contest with a wonderful fury, and on the first repulse flying off to try it somewhere else. Northern coolness against Southern fire, Northern slowness against Southern dash, were fairly pitted that day; and the Frenchy, enthusiastic, unstable Southerners went down.

A bright little three year old was sitting in his mother's lap a few evenings since, when he asked, "Are the stars in heaven?" The mother of course, responded in the affirmative, when the little fellow put the further question, "Are the stripes there, too, mother?"

THE KNICKERBOCKER FOR 1862

In the beginning of the last year, when its present proprietors assumed control of the Knickerbocker, they announced their determination to spare no pains to place it in its true position as the leading literary Monthly in America. When rebellion had raised a successful front, and its armies threatened the very existence of the Republic, it was impossible to permit a magazine, which in its circulation reached the best intellects in the land, to remain insensible or indifferent to the dangers which threatened the Union. The proprietors accordingly gave notice, that it would present in its pages forcible expositions with regard to the great question of the times - how to preserve the United States of America in their integrity and unity. How far this pledge has been redeemed the public must judge. It would, however, be mere affectation to ignore the seal of approbation which has been placed on these efforts. The proprietors gratefully acknowledge this, and it has led them to embark in a fresh undertaking, as already announced, - the publication of the CONTINENTAL MONTHLY, in which magazine, those who have sympathized with the political opinions recently set forth in the Knickerbocker, will find the same views more fully enforced and maintained by the ablest and most energetic minds in America.

The Knickerbocker while it will continue firmly pledged to the cause of the Union will henceforth be more earnestly devoted to literature, and will leave no effort untried to attain the highest excellence in those departments of letters which it has adopted as specialties.

The January number commences its thirtieth year. With such antecedents as it possesses, it seems unnecessary to make any special pledges as to its future, but it may not be amiss to say that it will be the aim of its conductors to make it more and more deserving of the liberal support it has hitherto received. The same eminent writers who have contributed to it during the past year will continue to enrich its pages, and in addition, contributions will appear from others of the highest reputation, as well as from many rising authors. While it will, as heretofore, cultivate the genial and humorous, it will also pay assiduous attention to the higher departments of art and letters, and give fresh and spirited articles on such biographical, historical, scientific, and general subjects as are of especial interest to the public.

In the January issue will commence a series of papers by Charles Godfrey Leland, entitled "Sunshine in Letters," which will be found interesting to scholars as well as to the general reader, and in an early number will appear the first chapters of a new and interesting Novel, descriptive of American life and character.

According to the unanimous opinion of the American press, the Knickerbocker has been greatly improved during the past year, and it is certain that at no period of its long career did it ever attract more attention or approbation. Confident of their enterprise and ability, the proprietors are determined that it shall be still more eminent in excellence, containing all that is best of the old, and being continually enlivened by what is most brilliant of the new.
