THE FOURTH OF JULY.—Shall we Celebrate?—This is the question, before which, just at present, all other questions, the goose question and the question as to whether lager will intoxicate included, dwindle into comparative insignificance. We notice that in the cities and large towns, preparations are being made on a magnificent scale to welcome the advent of our National birthday. All of which appears to us to be eminently befitting. We should—this year above all others—afford ourselves an opportunity to give free and unbridled ebullition to our latent Patriotism. The circumstances seem to demand a "Bl-Old-Time." Something after the good old fashioned style—to wit, music, oratory, gunpowder, lemonade and other mild, intoxication, toasts and trumpets—the whole revised and improved. However, with marginal notes annexed for future reference. In short, we should, in the spirit of thanksgiving, be joyous and grateful for the many "good gifts" showered upon us as a People, and thus evince our gratitude to that Great Disposer of Events who hath "made and preserved us a Nation."

One year ago, the hosts of Rebellion threatened the National Capital, and grave doubts were entertained as to whether another Fourth of July would dawn upon us in existence as a great and powerful Republic. A year has passed, and during that year a most glorious record has been engraved upon the pages of history, by the deeds of our heroes, who, with brave hearts and strong hands, have marched to victory over many a bloody field, always bearing aloft in triumph the glorious old "Stars and Stripes." The rebellion has dropped its haughty crest, and instead of presenting a threatening attitude towards the Government, it now is frantically struggling for its very existence. Victory crowns our efforts at every point, and Treason is about "pushed to the wall."

In view of these and other flattering facts, let us by all means have a Big Observation of the Occasion—a celebration as is a celebration. It will never do, you know, for Ebensburg to be behind her sister towns in matters pertaining to patriotism and national pride. Somebody second the motion—but don't all speak at once!

GRAND PIC NIE!—Preparations for holding a Pic Nie at the Fair Grounds, on the "Fourth," under the auspices and for the benefit of the Catholic church of this place, are being made on an extended scale. The young ladies, we notice, have taken the matter in hand, and, with that energy so characteristic of the sex, are pushing things forward swimmingly. The grounds are being renovated and refitted, platforms for dancing extemporized, swings erected, and various other arrangements, all looking to the special convenience and pleasure of visitors, put in working order. A sumptuous repast will be served up on the ground. The services of an excellent band of music have been secured for the occasion. Last, but not least, several addresses from orators of well known abilities will add zest to the exercises. So that, with this varied "bill of fare," all who are so inclined should certainly be able to put in a "gay and happy" day of it. We advise our readers—one and all—to attend. Tickets, fifty cents.

KILLED.—A young man named James Calligan, employed in one of the mines of the Cambria Iron Company, Johnstown, was instantly killed on Monday of last week by a mass of coal and slate falling upon him while engaged in removing the loose coal after having made what the miners term a "shoot." He was unmarried, and aged about 20 years. So we learn from the Tribune.

NEW FIRM!—By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that the new firm of C. T. Roberts & Co., at the Jewelry Store, on High street, have just received an extensive assortment of Clocks, Watches, Jewelry, etc., all of which will be disposed of "cheaper than ever." Call in and secure bargains.

MAN KILLED.—A most melancholy accident, resulting in the death of a man named Biglen, occurred near Cresson, this county, one day last week. The unfortunate man, it appears, had been in attendance upon a ball at No. 4, and returning home therefrom, along the line of the railroad, he fell or laid down on the track. Owing to over indulgence in intoxicating liquors, he was unable to perceive his danger—at all events, he remained where he fell until a freight train coming along, he was struck by the cow-catcher, and horribly mangled. One of his legs was crushed from the extremity to above the knee, and so badly injured that amputation was rendered necessary. All efforts to save him, however, were abortive. He lingered a day or so, when death put an end to his suffering. The deceased resided between Cresson and Gallitzin, and is spoken of as having been a worthy man. Alas! that he should have put an enemy into his mouth to steal away—his life!

PENNSYLVANIA RESERVES.—This excellent body of soldiers, who composed part of McDowell's division and were stationed at Fredericksburg for some time past, have been sent forward to reinforce Gen. McClellan, before Richmond. They went down the Rappahannock on transports, conveyed by war steamers, and at latest accounts were at White House, in the extreme front of the Union army.—They will make their mark when the proper time arrives.

HINTS TO YOUNG MEN.—A thorough business education, such as can be obtained at the Iron City College, Pittsburg, Pa., has already proved a fortune to many a young man. The advantages of this celebrated school are many and great, and the rising generation should not be slow in availing themselves thereof.

NEWS-ARTICLE.—Mr. James S. Todd, former publisher of the Ebensburg Democrat & Sentinel, has assumed the editorship of that paper since the decease of its late editor, Mr. Murray. We welcome him to the tripod, and wish him a liberal share of success.

Letter from Johnstown. JOHNSTOWN, June 23, 1862. To the Editor of The Alleghenian: An extensive burglary was committed here a few days since. The millinery establishment of Mrs. Clark, on Franklin street, was entered, and goods to the value of $150 carried off. On the same night, fifty dollars in scrip was stolen from R. Durach, a grocer on Canal street. No clue to the perpetrators of these daring robberies has yet been found.

Not a little excitement was created among early risers on Main street the other morning, by the appearance of a horse, with the front part of a wagon attached, coming down the street at railroad speed. They were found to belong to a milk-wagon, the coupling of which had broken, thus throwing down the hind part and precipitating driver, milk-cans and all in every direction. The horse was secured and returned to his owner, who was standing speechless, gazing upon the wreck around him, and meditating, no doubt, on the sudden and extraordinary "fall of milk."

The Ninevah Pic Nie came off as per announcement. Your correspondent had not the pleasure of being present thereat, but understands that it was a large arrangement. One young gentleman I wot of "cussed a few," by reason of missing the train which conveyed the picnickers to the grounds, through the dilatoriness of his inamorata in matters pertaining to the toilet.

Another Pic Nie was held at Morrell's Grove on Thursday last. Lager and mutilated music formed the principal attraction, and were dispensed with a lavish hand. The coming Fourth of July will be prolific of affairs of this kind. I have already heard of no less than seven on the tapis.

About the neatest specimen of loax that I have seen lately was contained in the columns of the Indiana Democrat of a few weeks since. The editor gravely informed his readers that he had it "from a gentleman from Johnstown that Wood, Morrell & Co. (of the Rolling Mill) had hired several 'contrabands' to work for them, paying them twenty-five cents per day," and furthermore, that "the white laborers threw down their tools and said they would not work a stroke until the 'niggers' were discharged." Whereupon Mr. Morrell "had to leave them go, and the laborers then resumed their work." Now, this is sheer fabrication. Some enterprising Johnstown has gulled the editor of the Democrat most completely, as no transaction of the kind ever occurred here. E.

The "Shingling" Question. BEulah, June 23, 1862. Dear Alleghenian, &c: "Is it anybody's business What another's business is?"

In the name of the prophet I hear me patiently for two minutes. I observe that a public journal, printed in this immediate locality—the greater the pity—has seen fit to enter a protest against the now quite prevalent custom of girls "shingling," otherwise cutting very short and to a point, their hair. The editor refers, I presume, to the hair growing upon the caput proper. He does not explicitly say so, however. If so, the occasion calls for a few remarks from "over the way."

Per contra—briefly—then: In the first place. The abbreviated style of hair, were its introduction to become general, would effectually prevent women from getting into one another's top-knots—as is now unfortunately so often the case whenever they become belligerently inclined. Secondly. It would save the enormous outlay expended on combs (of various sorts) and hair-pins; also, the trouble of keeping these articles where they could by any possibility be found when wanted. Thirdly. It would save much precious time, patience, perseverance and hair-oil—all of which elements, as every lady knows, enter largely into the composition of a "presentable" figure-head. Fourthly. It would enable young ladies to keep constantly on hand a large and well selected assortment of "flowing locks," to be presented to importunate admirers. Fifthly. If it failed to produce many admirers amongst the opposite sex," as the editor aforesaid is of opinion, it might, at least, conduce to the comfort and convenience of those whom it most intimately concerns—the girls themselves.

And so on, down to Seventeenth—all going to show that, as you emphasize it in the masculine lingo, the "style" in question is "decidedly the thing." The editor's opinion as above to the contrary notwithstanding. Inasmuch as it is altogether probable that the "shingling" crotchet will undergo no serious detriment from newspaperial strictures of the antagonistic persuasion, come from whatsoever source they may, but, on the contrary, that the girls—"All shingled and shorn"—will do in the matter—as they do in all matters in which they are concerned—just as they please, I close by directing the prayerful attention of the editor aforesaid to the apt little couplet at the top of these "few brief remarks."
