OUR HOUR OF PERIL!—To Arms!—More men are required for the suppression of the Rebellion. More brave hearts and strong hands are needed.

Our heroic brethren in arms before the Rebel capital are looking with intense anxiety for the response of the people of the North.

The traitors, as well as the loyal army which has suffered and sacrificed so much, are also anxiously awaiting the decision.

As a great deal has been said about "drafting" in this connection, the following brief letter from Mr. Diven, Member of Congress from New York, who is engaged in raising volunteers among his constituents, to a gentleman engaged in the same work, is apropos.

The wise and sagacious Secretary of State, Mr. Seward, in a note urging the policy of instant enlistment of men, also says: "All is well if we instantly show our strength!"

—Cambrians! a word to you. Let it never be said that ye stood back when the priceless boon bequeathed you by your fathers—Liberty!—was in peril!

for naught? That self-government shall be written down a lie and sham? That we—as a Nation—be hurled into a state of social and political degradation worse than untold miseries?
