

ODDS & ENDS.

The Owasco in the Engagement of Galveston.

The gunboat Owasco, under command of Capt. Wilson, was lying on the wharf on which the Union troops were stationed when the attack was made on the Harriet Lane. She immediately steamed up to take part in the fight, and not within 300 yards of the scene of action, when she could not approach nearer. She was within easy range of the rebel rifle-men, as the bullet marks through her bulwarks plainly show. Her shrouds were shot away, and most of the injuries received by her men were the result of musketry, as will be seen by the above list.

Just at daybreak the enemy got possession of the Harriet Lane, tore down the United States flag, and raised a small Confederate flag on a flag of truce. The Owasco, finding the Harriet Lane was in the hands of the rebels, sent a shot clean through her machinery, just above the water line, having first steamed down out of musket range. The shot probably disabled her, as the rebel vessels subsequently towed her off to the wharf. The rebels replied to the Owasco with the guns of the Harriet Lane.

About an hour after daybreak, General Magruder sent a flag of truce, in charge of two rebel officers, on board the Owasco. He demanded the surrender of all the vessels in the harbor, and gave three hours for deliberation. The captain of the Owasco sent the flag of truce to Commodore Ronshaw, saying he had no power in the matter.

The rebel Governor of Texas (Lubbock) accompanied the flag of truce, and became so much interested in the Owasco, and so much amused by his own conversation, that he remained on the Owasco while the officers went to the Westfield with the flag of truce.

"She is a fine vessel," said the Governor, looking about admiringly. "She will be a fine addition to the Confederate navy." The captain of the Owasco, not seeing the subject exactly in that light, put on steam, and started toward the bar, passing the rebel batteries with the Governor on deck, earnestly conversing on the prowess of capturing the vessels then in the harbor, bestowing especial praise upon the Owasco. He wanted to know how much the vessel cost. He walked from gun to gun, asked the calibre, and many other questions, until he suddenly awoke to the fact that the ship was gradually slipping out of the rebel power.

"I wish to go ashore now, captain, if you please," said the Governor. "The weather," replied the captain, "is exceedingly fine to-day. Governor, do you always get so pleasant a New Year's day as this in Galveston? It is really charming."

"This is not right," said the Governor; "I wish now to go ashore." "By the way, Governor," replied the captain, the Owasco meantime pushing on with good speed "by the way, Governor, you are the successor of old Sam Houston in the gubernatorial chair. Houston was quite popular North at one time; but he seems to have gone over to the rebels. Do you know where he is now?"

"Sir," said the Governor, "this is all wrong. I came here under a flag of truce and I now demand that you stop this vessel and put me ashore." "Houston was a singular man," replied the captain, "a very singular man indeed," speaking in apparent unconsciousness of the Governor's dearest thoughts. "He won a great reputation as the champion of Texas independence, and was regarded as one of the firmest Union men in the whole South."

The Governor discovered, when too late, that, having allowed the flag of truce to depart without accompanying it, he could no longer claim its protection, and he now began to fear not only that the Owasco would slip off, which she was all the time doing, but that he would be carried off as a prisoner. However, the captain kept him on board only until he had passed all the rebel batteries in safety when he obligingly set him ashore.

There is little doubt that the shot fired through the Harriet Lane saved her from getting out to sea, and that, if not retaken by us, she will at least be destroyed.

"A 'Down Easter,' it is said, recently told a citizen of the 'Lone Star Republic' that nothing could beat the corn in Connecticut. The Texan said he knew nothing of the crops in that section, but in his country the corn stalks bore seven or eight large ears, and a ground on top, with several quarts of shelled corn in it. The Yankee took his hat and traveled.

A CARD.—WILKINSON'S BRIDGE, Lancaster Tp., July 23, 1860. Messrs. FRANK W. HAYSON & CO., Ebensburg: The small size No. 1 Salamander safe which I purchased from your agent, Mr. Adam R. Barr, in Lancaster City, on July 20th, 1859, has been subjected to a very severe test, which it withstood in a most satisfactory manner. This safe, containing all my books together with valuable papers belonging to myself and some to my neighbors and friends, and representing a value of over Twenty Thousand Dollars, ($20,000) was in my Mill which was destroyed on the night of the 27th of July, 1860, and passed through the fiery ordeal unscathed. The safe was on the second floor and fell to the basement of the Mill, and was subjected for six hours to an intense heat among the ruins, which was greatly increased by the combustion of a large quantity of grain confined within the brick walls. After the fire the safe was opened and the books and papers taken out in a state of perfect preservation, the paper not even being discolored. This fact was, however, to many bystanders a better recommendation of your safe than could be expressed in any other words from me. Yours Respectfully, SAMUEL RANCK.

A large assortment of the above quality of Fire and Thief Proof Safes always on hand and for sale at as low rates as any other firm, at EVANS & WATSON'S, No. 16 South Fourth st., Philadelphia.
