LLOYD'S CEMETERY.—One day last week we paid a visit to this spot of "hallowed ground," and were really astonished at the want of improvement and good taste therein manifest. The entire enclosure has been suffered to grow up in noxious weeds and brambles, until now it presents the appearance, almost, of a howling wilderness. About the only features which redeem it from this imputation are the imposing shafts and stones that mark the last resting-places of mortals who have put on immortality, and the grassy mounds that cover them. All the rest is "disorder unredeemed." This, in a public cemetery—a cemetery within the confines of which many of us expect to be laid for our last rest—is a wrong state of affairs. A decent respect for the memory of relatives and friends who have "gone before" should make it incumbent upon us to cause the place to be beautified and adorned. Outward professions and demonstrations may not generally be considered to constitute a very reliable criterion of that which one really practices or feels; but where one beautifies the tomb of a father, or mother, or sister, or brother, or friend—wreathes a chaplet, or plants a shrub, or drops a flower upon the same—it is strong presumptive evidence that he bears within his bosom a recollection of the virtues of the deceased and of sorrow at his bereavement.

Death, in his most inviting aspect, is repulsive. But his coming may not be deferred. He levels alike, at his own good time, the high and the low, the rich and the poor, the learned and the unlearned—all. We can only, therefore, chant a sorrowful song at his each succeeding visitation, and put on outward manifestations of grief and mourning.—One of these manifestations, and a fit, is a proper beautifying of the spot wherein is deposited the case of a never-dying soul.

By a judicious system of adornment, the Cemetery might be made to prove an attraction to draw us, once in a time, from the allurements of pleasure and the perplexities of business, to hold solemn, instructive communion with the dead. And thus, the lesson might be impressed upon our unwilling souls that we, too, some day, must be called upon to become an inmate of some city of the dead—warning us to prepare ourselves for the change from corruptible to incorruptible, "before it be forever too late."

A sequestered spot, on a gentle eminence, where the pure winds of heaven kiss the dewy fragrance from off the grassy mounds, and the solemn old forest is continually sending forth requiems for departed worth, the natural location and surroundings of the Cemetery are unsurpassable. What is needed is a little artificial aid. Let the weeds and brambles be rooted out; let grass-plots and flowers spring up in their stead; let the willow and evergreen be allowed to rear their heads; open out carriage-drives and foot-walks; give the enclosure a thorough renovation and overhauling—let these and any other improvements which may suggest themselves be performed, and then, and not until then, will Lloyd's Cemetery fully answer the purpose for which it was intended.

Inasmuch as these proposed improvements would necessarily involve considerable expense, and as the sum total thereof might prove an insuperable obstacle to the perfecting of the same by the association having the Cemetery in charge, it strikes us that a good course to pursue in the premises would be to lift a public collection. No one, at least no one who has a relative or friend interred therein, would refuse to donate a small sum for the purpose herein indicated.

—Since the rains of last week, the dog-days have been at an end. The weather now, especially in the evenings, is extremely cool, strongly suggestive of "two in a bed and spoon fashion." —Our old friend, Hen M'Pike, of Altoona, we notice, has been so fortunate as to draw a prize in the late draft for 1863. Sympathetically, yours, &c.

A GREAT PUBLIC BENEFIT.—It is about finished! The last board has been properly adjusted, the last nail driven in and clinched, the last coating of paint administered—almost. We are speaking of Our New Market House. This structure, after a couple of months of severe mental and physical labor, has been bro't to such a pitch of perfection, that, although not yet quite perfect, it has been deemed advisable to open its doors for the purpose of trade and traffic in all and singular the edibles known as beef and butter, poultry and potatoes, country cheese and cucumbers, apples, artichokes, eggs, black and all other kinds of berries, cabbage, green corn, Bologna sausage, pennyroyal tea leaves, fresh fish, beans, &c., &c., too numerous to mention, but which the palate of an epicure will not fail to properly appreciate—to open its doors to the public, we were going to say, on next Saturday morning. To those who have suffered, in sorrow and silence, the difficulties attendant at one time upon procuring a nice cut of beefsteak, or a fresh roll of butter, or a dozen or two of newly-laid eggs—who have trudged from one extreme of town to the other, in doubt and uncertainty as to the final success of their mission—who have paid double prices at one store by reason of not knowing that the same article was sold cheaper at another—to all such unfortunates this announcement of a grand central rendezvous, where all that is required to tickle the palate may be found, prices compared, and the pick and choice of the lot accumulated, will in itself be sufficient to cause a deep-seated and utterly inexpressible feeling of thanksgiving and rejoicing.—We rejoice, in common with the rest, for we are but human. Our bosom boils over with sentiments of intense love and things for our City Fathers, in that, when their term of office expires, and they retire to the shades of private life, they will leave as a monument to commemorate their good deeds, officially speaking, this Great Public Benefit—on wood, painted yellow—the aforesaid Market House.

The structure itself, which justly lays claim to considerable pretensions to architectural beauty and finish, is located on Sample street, immediately adjoining premises of M. Hason, Esq. Those journeying thereunto from the East Ward will strike off in a northerly direction at Centre street, for the distance of one square, thence west one square; those from the West Ward will ascend Julian street one square, thence east same distance—arriving, if these directions be strictly followed, at the Market House in due course of time. Of course, should any citizen prefer to vary the route here laid down by diving into dark alleys and the like, he is at liberty to do so.

When the rules and regulations for the guidance of the concern are made public, we will present them to our readers. In the meantime we tender our congratulations to the public at large at this happy metamorphosis of an uncertainty into a certainty, and offer a silent prayer in behalf of the man who first broached the idea of a Market House for Ebensburg.

TO YOUR TENTS, O ISRAEL!—A mass meeting of the Democracy of this county is expected to come off at the Court House, Ebensburg, on Tuesday afternoon next, 8th inst., at 3 o'clock. "Many distinguished speakers have been invited"—which is not exactly synonymous with saying they will attend. The Democracy are affectionately entertained, by handbill and otherwise, to "turn out, and prove by their presence that the Frosty Sons of Thunder are not indifferent, in this hour of peril to the old Keystone State." The inference one might naturally draw from this somewhat ambiguous sentence would be that a couple of military companies were about to be formed, to help crush the Rebellion; but this is all wrong. The "peril" and "Keystone State" part of the appeal have undoubtedly reference to Woodward's rather slim chances for gubernatorial honors. Judging from the list of well-known Copperheads who have been invited to be present, and shed buttered words of treason to the assembled auditory, we think the Frosty Sons of Thunder would better prove their non-indifference "in this hour of peril," etc., by staying at home at 3 o'clock, P. M., on Tuesday, 8th inst. However, this is only our impression—if they meet, as we suppose they will, we wish them a good time, hoping none may be struck by lightning.

$300 COMMUTATION MONEY: HOW IT CAN BE PAID.—For the information of those of our readers who have been drafted and desire to pay commutation money, we are authorized by Mr. Rbyer, Collector of this District, to state that he will be at Huntingdon during the examination for the whole District. The money can be deposited in any of the Banking Houses in the District, in the name of the person making the deposit, and the certificate will be received by the Collector, at Huntingdon, in preference to money.

Persons who do not intend to stand an examination need not, necessarily, go to Huntingdon. The certificate of deposit can be sent to Mr. Royer's address at Huntingdon, and he will furnish the Board of Enrollment with the necessary receipts, and forward the discharge to the address of the person sending him the certificate.

Persons intending to stand an examination before paying the money should be prepared with the money or certificate, so as to make immediate payment should their application for discharge, on other grounds, be rejected.

Payment must be made in U. S. Treasury Notes.

Condon, resulting in the selection of the following named teachers: School No. 1, Samuel Singleton—salary $35.00 per month; No. 2, Edward D. Evans—salary $28.00; No. 3, Daniel W. Evans—salary 28.00; No. 4, Mrs. Clark—salary $20.00. Seven applicants were examined. The Schools will open next Monday morning, 7th inst, for an eight months' term.

KILLED.—A boy about 16 years of age, named John W. Plotner, son of Henry W. Plotner, of Wilmore, was so injured on Thursday, the 20th, at Wilmore, by the cars, that he lived only about three hours. He had been on the platform of a car, when as the engine whistled off breaks he attempted to jump off, but falling under the wheels the cars passed over his back. His remains were taken charge of by his father.
