

ODDS & ENDS.

How Mr. STANTON SETTLED A POINT.—A Washington correspondent writes as follows:

The town is laughing at an amusing story of a recent interview between the Secretary of War and the President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. I give it as I find it afloat.

"The draft has fallen with great severity upon the employees of our company."

"Indeed?"

"If something is not done to relieve us, it is difficult to foresee the consequences."

"Let them pay the commutation."

"Impossible! the men can't stand such a tax."

"They have a rich company at their back, and that's more than other people have."

"They ought to be exempted, because they are necessary to the working of the road for the Government."

"That can't be."

"Then, I will stop the road."

"If you do, I'll take it up and carry it on."

The discussion is said to have been dropped at this point, and the very worthy President is still working the road as successfully as ever.

A jovial federal prisoner, Junius H. Brown, writes a facetious letter in the Mark Tapley vein to a Cincinnati paper, from his cell in the military prison at Salisbury, N. C., under date of February 10. He says the stoves the rebels give prisoners "compensate for the absence of all heat by a perpetual emission of smoke;" that the prisoners live on bread and pork, and often bread alone, with smoke and cold interspersed ad libitum, and that they "distinguish breakfast from dinner by inhaling an extra volume of smoke, and taking five additional shivers."

He adds:

"Most adversely for me, my appetite has increased in an inverse proportion to our provender. However, I manage matters very well. When I become very hungry, I expose myself to the cold, and vice versa; so one discomfort strangles another, and I am enabled to continue the beatitudes of my bondage. Who would not be a prisoner?"

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher says of the President: "Mr. Lincoln is the homely President of a homely people. He is honest, conscientious, single-minded, disinterestedly seeking the welfare of the nation first, the party next, and of himself not at all. He has been faithful to the great political truths of our American system, and he has shown to the world that successful government is not the mystery, is not the thing so rare that only a privileged few can enact it, but the good administration of a government requires only good common sense and uncommon honesty. That is all. Instead of requiring genius, instead of requiring rare and extraordinary qualities, it requires just those qualities which most politicians sacrifice in order to get government—common sense and common honesty. This is a lesson for Europe to ponder over."

I cannot forbear pointing out to you, my dearest child, said Lord Collingwood to his daughter, the great advantage that will result from a temperate conduct and sweetness of manner to all persons on all and every occasion. Never forget, then, that you are a gentle woman, and all your words and actions should make you gentle. I never heard your mother—your dear, good mother—say a hasty thing to anybody in my life. Endeavor to imitate her. I am quick and hasty in my temper; but, my darling, it is a misfortune which, not having been sufficiently restrained in my youth, has caused inexpressible pain. It has given me more trouble to restrain this impetuosity than anything I ever undertook.

Gen. Burnside was taken by a very pleasant assault and battery at Augusta, Maine, the other day, if we may credit the Portland Press, which, in referring to his welcome at the council chamber, says "that quite a large company of young ladies, married and single, held back very reticently till others had left the coast clear, when they took the gallant soldier by storm, and with well-directed aim planted their kisses directly in his face."

The Chicago people are building an observatory. It is to contain a telescope twenty-three feet long, which will weigh about six tons—or twice as much as the great equatorial at Cambridge, Mass. Its cost is estimated at $18,000. Mr. James Dull, of Harrisburg, is one of the contractors for the erection of this work.
