

ODDS & ENDS.

We can't imagine what made Proquest Marshal Nash do it. We have requested him repeatedly not to put our name in the box. But he did, and yesterday "grafted us into the army."

However, we must say that we have felt a sprinkling of patriotic pride since we have been in the service of our country. It is a glorious thing to die for one's native land and in defence of its hearth-stones and its homes.

Whether on the scaffold high,
Or in the battle's van,
The fittest place for man to die Is where he dies for man."

We would respectfully request our friends, if they have any respect for our feelings, not to continually remind us of our misfortune by saluting our ears with,
"Have you, conscript?" We haven't heard it over five hundred times in the last two hours.

We are not to blame for being a conscript. If we could have our way, we would have the drawing over again.— There are a large number in the ward we would rather see go than ourselves, and wouldn't quarrel with them about making better soldiers. We have in our mind several who would make altogether better marks for rebel bullets than we would.— But it seems Uncle Sam wants us, and we haven't $300 right handy, suppose we shall have to go.

N. B.—A suit of second-hand clothes for sale cheap. Possession given in ten days. In the meantime our friends will more agreeably consult our feelings and wishes by refraining from calling us "Conscript," and quietly placing within our reach illuminated portraits of our beloved President and Secretary Chase.— None of less value than five dollars accepted.—Nashville Union

U. S. Grant's first position at West Point was that of private in the battalion of cadets. As a novice, he must needs pass through the usual ordeals. One day, when the company was enjoying a sham review, he was continually harassed with practical jokes. Stepping quickly in front of the parade, and tossing his cadet uniform to a comrade, he cried out, with keen, piercing tones:

"No more of this, gentlemen!"
"Why, what's the matter?" they all stammered out, taken by surprise.
"I say, no more of this! Captain, if you don't know your duty better than to violate good discipline in this manner, lay aside your assumed position for a few moments, and I will teach it to you."

The Captain dropped his rank, and stepping up to Grant, was soon laid sprawling, and soundly punished on the parade ground.

"Now," said Grant, quietly turning to the next in command, "as you have shared in this fun, Lieutenant, it is your duty to defend your Captain."

The two men were soon engaged, and the Lieutenant shared the fate of the commander.

Grant now squared himself before the front, and glancing his flashing eye along the line, and raising his voice still higher, he exclaimed:

"You now understand, gentlemen, what is the matter. This is what's the matter, gentlemen: I am for the protection of my rights, and I will protect them, if I have to grapple with every member of this company!"

There was a shout along the whole line —"Bravo!" "Well done, Grant!" "Bravo!"
"Three cheers for Ohio pluck!"
"Here, Grant, you've fairly won the day against all odds!" exclaimed the Captain, extending a fraternal hand. "We shan't poke fun at you any more!" chimed in the Lieutenant. "No, that we shan't!" exclaimed others of his comrades, now in the best of spirits.

Grant stooped down and calmly put on his coat, as if nothing unusual had happened; but he was never annoyed after that with any cadet fun at his expense.— He was ever after called, as a brevet to his proof of bravery, "Company Grant." He is thus known to this day by many in the army.
