

ODDS & ENDS.

In the Pennsylvania Legislature, two years ago, there was a member named Charles Wilson, from one of the northern counties, who considered himself among the great orators of the day, and, when pretty well filled with "Harrisburg water," would get off for the edification of his colleagues some very rich illustrations. Being somewhat interested in a bill before the House, he made what he considered one of his master speeches, during the delivery of which he used the illustration of "Nero fiddling while Rome was burning." He had scarcely taken his seat when a member tapped him on the shoulder and said, "Say, Charlie, it wasn't Nero that fiddled; it was Caesar. You should correct that before it goes on the record." In an instant he was on his feet, and exclaimed, "Mr. Speaker—Mr. Speaker—I made a mistake. It wasn't Nero that fiddled while Rome was burning; it was Julius Caesar." Happily for him, the speaker was so busily engaged that he did not hear him; but some members near by heard and enjoyed the joke. Afterwards some one told him that he was right in the first place, which resulted in his reading all the ancient history in the State Library during the remainder of the winter, to assure himself who it was that fiddled.

After the advent of Gen. Logan's corps at Huntsville, the rooms in the principal hotel at that place came into demand. A beautiful and accomplished actress had been staying at the hotel, and in about a minute, or a minute and a half or two minutes after she had vacated her room, the gallant Gen. O. was assigned to it by the landlord. The General, on examining his bed previous to retiring, found a snowy robe de nuit neatly folded under the pillow, marked in delicate characters with the name of the fair owner. The chambermaid was summoned, and asked by the General, he holding the garment in his hand—

"Do you know Miss Lottie Hough?"
"Yes," answered the chambermaid.
"Then carry this to her, with my compliments, and say to her that General O. is not in the habit of sleeping with empty nightgowns!"

Lorenzo Dow, the itinerant preacher, so famous in his lifetime for his eccentricity, commenced his sermon upon one occasion by reading from St. Paul, "I can do all things." The preacher paused, took off his spectacles, laid them on the open Bible, and said, "No, Paul, you're mistaken for once; I'll bet you five dollars you can't, and stake the money." At the same time putting his hand in his pocket, he took out a five dollar bill, laid it upon the Bible, and said, "through Jesus Christ our Lord," "Ah, Paul," exclaimed the preacher, snatching up the five dollar bill and returning it to his pocket—"that's a different matter; the bet's withdrawn."

The word "News" is not, as many imagine, derived from the adjective new. In former times, between the years 1525 and 1737, it was a prevalent practice to put over the periodical publications of the day the initial letters of the cardinal points of the compass, thus:

N

Importing that these periodicals contained intelligence from the four quarters of the globe; and from this practice is derived the term News-paper.

A young man and woman once upon a time stopped at a country tavern. Their awkward appearance excited the attention of one of the landlord's family, who struck up a conversation with them by inquiring how far they had traveled that day. "Traveled!" exclaimed the fairer of the strangers, somewhat indignantly, "we didn't travel—we rid!"

At a christening, while the minister was making out the certificate, he forgot the day of the month, and happened to say:

"Let me see, this is the thirtieth."
"The thirtieth!" exclaimed the indignant mother, "no such thing; it's only the eleventh!"

Booth, the tragedian, had a broken nose. A lady once remarked to him, "I like your acting, Mr. Booth; but, to be frank with you, I can't get over your nose." "No wonder, madam," replied he, "the bridge is gone."
