

A BEAUTIFUL DEED.—A young officer was connected with Sheridan's brigade. It was in one of those forced marches when they had driven back the enemy and had been in the saddle for several consecutive days and nights, that this trooper availed himself of a temporary halt, to slip from his saddle and stretch himself upon the turf—his horse, meanwhile, browsing in the immediate vicinity. He had slept for some little time, when he was suddenly awakened by the frantic pawing of his horse at his side. Fatigued by his long ride, he did not rouse at once, but lay in that partially conscious state which so frequently attends great physical prostration. Soon, however, the faithful animal perceiving that its efforts had failed to accomplish their object, licked his face, and placing its mouth close to his ear uttered a loud snort. Now thoroughly awake, he sprang up, and as the horse turned for him to mount, he saw for the first time that his comrades had all disappeared, and that the enemy were coming down upon him at full gallop.—Once mounted, the faithful beast bore him with the speed of the wind safely from the danger and soon placed him among his companions. "Thus," he cried with emotion, "the noble fellow saved me from captivity, and perhaps from death."

AMUSING INCIDENT.—A few mornings since, as the stage from Jefferson city was smoothly gliding along through a luxuriant prairie, pretty well loaded with passengers, amongst whom was a son of Kentucky, who, by the vibratory motion of the vehicle, had fallen into a sound snooze, by some unaccountable accident it suddenly tipped over, depositing the passengers, pell mell, on the green sward by the roadside, the Kentuckian at the bottom, with several on top of him, amongst whom were three or four of the gentler sex. No one being hurt, and "old Kentuck" only a little aroused from the depth of his slumber, he cried out: "What in the thunder is the matter?—get off of me, if you please. I've paid for this seat, and all the varnishes west of the Mississippi can't take it from me!" "The stage has turned over," said several voices at once. "The devil it has!" roared out old Kentuck. "Is anybody killed? I tho't of from the pile of men and women on me, it was only a trick to get my seat!"

MAILING MATTER OUTSIDE OF THE POST OFFICE.—The Post Office Department at Washington is notifying the postmasters generally that the penalties fixed by law for carrying letters outside of the mails, when not enclosed in Government stamped envelopes, will be rigidly enforced hereafter in every instance where violations are known to exist. Many persons have been in the habit of mailing their letters on the cars, on steamboats, omnibuses, hacks, &c., because it was more convenient to do so than to deposit them in the post office. Sometimes it was especially convenient to do so, after the mails at the post office had closed. But the law against the practice is very plain. The reason of it is that not only does the Government suffer from the loss of this carrying, but mail agents and mail carriers have no cancelling apparatus to destroy stamps with, and neither have they rating scales with which to determine the amount of postage that should be paid on a letter, and hence it often happens that the uncancelled stamps have been used again and again by dishonest persons.

THE MAN WHO DESPISED WHISKEY DRINKERS.—It was on one of the river steamers, at dinner, that an able matronly lady remarked in the midst of conversation with a grave-looking gentleman, on the subject of temperance: "Oh, of all things in the world, I despise whiskey-drinkers!" The gentleman dropped his knife and fork in the ardor of his feeling, extended his hand and took hers within his own, and with emotion that threatened tears over the loss of ruined sons, he replied with faltering words: "Madame, I respect your sentiments and the heart that dictates them, I permit no one to go beyond me in despising whiskey drinking. I have been disgusted on this very boat, and I say it now before our Captain's face. What, I say, can be more disgusting than to see a well-dressed, respectable, and virtuous-looking young man step up to the bar of this boat, and, without fear of observing eyes, boldly ask for whiskey, when they know that there is in that bar the best old cognac brandy?"

A CARD.— WILMER'S BRIDGE, Lancaster Tp. July 30, 1860

Messrs. EVANS and WATSON: Gentlemen—The small size No. 1 Salamander safe which I purchased of your agent, Mr. Adams & Co., in Lancaster City, on July 20th, 1860, has been subjected to a very severe test, which it withstood in a most satisfactory manner. The safe, containing all my together with valuable papers belonging myself and some to my neighbors and friends, and representing a value of over Twenty thousand Dollars, ($20,000) was in my Mill and was destroyed on the night of the 27th of July, 1860, and passed through the fire unscathed. The safe was on the second story and fell to the basement of the Mill, and subjected for six hours to an intense heat among the ruins, which was greatly increased by the combustion of a large quantity of confined within the brick walls. After the safe was opened and the books and papers taken out in a state of perfect preservation, the paper not even being discolored. This fact was, however, to many a better recommendation of your safe, than could be expressed in any other words.
Yours Respectfully,
SAMUEL RAND
