

A DECIDED SELL.—On Saturday afternoon a man drove his horse and buggy up to the Market House in Chambersburg, and attracted the bystanders by declaring it was more blessed to give than to receive, and offering a good five dollar United States note for four dollars. He was not long in finding a customer, and he delivered the note and pocketed the four dollars. He then continued to demonstrate his faith in biblical assurance that giving was more blessed than receiving, by offering a good one dollar note for seventy-five cents. The offer was accepted by one of the crowd, and the stranger followed the transaction by drawing from his pocket a handful of five cent notes and flinging them among his already large audience. Such a novel proceeding on the part of a man who was evidently sober, naturally attracted the attention of all within hearing, and as a crowd always gathers from passers-by, he had what might be termed a large and appreciative audience. He next offered a lot of rings to the crowd. He said that he meant to give them away, but he preferred that purchasers should pay him a dime, and he would at once refund the money. A dozen brass rings soon changed hands and the money was promptly refunded. He next offered a dozen watch chains at a dollar each on same terms. They were at once taken, the money paid and refunded. He then offered bracelets at five dollars each on same terms, and prompt sales and quick returns were made, and the money refunded as before. By this time there was an active demand among the crowd for jewelry on such terms; but the dealer closed, and said he meant to divide his favors and he would move across the street to Brown's Hotel, where he would give others a chance for some of his bargains. He then drove across the street, and of course the crowd followed him, in spite of his remonstrance, in which he urged that those who had already received his goods should stand back and let others have a chance. He then offered his rings and chains as before, and returned the money, talking in the jolliest manner to the crowd, which was greatly excited by the novelty of the transaction and the liberal offers of jewelry, without cost. He then offered his bracelets, as before, and hurriedly sold off eleven for which he received five dollars each. The twelfth was not taken, although offered for some time. He then said that he supposed the reason it was not taken was that he was then making bona fide sales, as he had not promised to give the money back, which was only too true for the hasty purchasers; and suiting the action to the word, the itinerant dealer crammed the fifty-five dollars in his pocket, announced the sale as closed, and immediately drove out of town, amid the mingled cheers, laughter and curses of the crowd. He had given away in money and jewelry probably five dollars worth, and carried off fifty-five dollars, clearing fifty dollars by the ten minutes operation. He goes on the principle that fools and their money are easily parted, and if he succeeds elsewhere as well as he did here, he can soon retire.

ALL ABOUT THE DANGEROUS NATURE OF LAUREL SWAMPS.—A writer in the "American Exchange and Review," on the subject of "Our American Sylva," writes: "Although the mountain laurel is found scattered through the New England States, growing plentifully in some localities, yet it never attains there the size and beauty it does on the Alleghany range in Pennsylvania and southward. In this section it may be seen in its greatest glory, often forming dense thickets twenty feet high, growing under the shade of forest trees seemingly unaffected by the situation, and appearing to prefer the darkness of such places, from whence its terminal corymbs of bright rose colored or pale white blossoms gleam in striking beauty from a shady place. These continuous brakes or groves are called in that region laurel swamps; the branching stems cross and twist together forming a thicket almost impenetrable to man or beast. Though beautiful to the eye, they are the terror of the hunter and the engineer, who, attempting to cross these labyrinthine, often find themselves enveloped in a net of iron which retains its prey like a trap. The engineers who laid out the Pennsylvania Railroad over the Alleghany, discovered the skeletons of several men who had thus been caught and starved to death."

A CARD.—
Wm. W. BARNES,
Lancaster Twp., July 30, 1861.
Messrs. EVANS AND WATSON: Gentles—
The small size No. 1 Salamander Gun I purchased from your agent, Mr. A. A.
Barker, in Lancaster City, on July 30th, has been subjected to a very severe with it whistled in a most dangerous manner. This safe, containing all together with valuable papers, bridles, my life and some to my neighbors and representing a value of over Twenty and Dollars, ($20,000) was in my Mill was destroyed on the night of the 27th ly, 1860, and passed through the City unscathed. The safe was on the second and fell to the basement of the Mill, and subjected for six hours to an intense among the ruins, which was greatly increased by the combustion of a large quantity confined within the brick walls. A fire the safe was opened and the book-papers taken out in a state of perfect vation, the paper not even being dis-This fact was, however, to many eyes a better recommendation of your safe could be expressed in any other way.
Yours Respectfully,
SAMUEL BARNES.
